Nixon Pledges Consultation With Allies on Soviet Talks

MLA'S EJECTION IRKS BENNETT

By JOHN MIKA

Premier Bennett today came close to rebuking his own back-benchers and publicly apologizing to NDP MLA Gordon Dowding who was driven from the legislature on the last day of the session.

Dowding was formally censured and ordered to leave the legislative chamber in an unprecedented action initiated by a motion from Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver-Centre) and Donald Phillips (SC—South Peace River) a week ago.

Bennett, talking to reporters this morning on his way to a cabinet meeting, reinforced an impression that he privately was opposed to the motion which the Socreds rammed through despite opposition protests that Dowding was not given a fair chance to defend himself.

"There has been too much discussion on personalities," Bennett said in reviewing the session.

'TERRIBLE ATTACK'

"There was a terrible attack on Mr. Sommers and Mr. Gaglardi and now Mr. Dowding."

Bennett said he had never dealt in personalities during his 27 years in public office and opposed such tactics.

"I always leave personalities alone," he said.

Asked if he had lost control of his party when it expelled Dowding, Bennett replied:

"I never had control at any time because every single member, whether it's a cabinet or private member, has a right to speak in his own voice."

Bennett didn't explain why he voted along with the rest of his party to heave Dowding out of the legislature for the last day.

It was remarked at the time that the premier was the last to get to his feet in the roll-call vote and appeared to hesitate in thought before finally standing with the Socreds around him.

NDP Has Choice Of Young Blood

By JOHN SLINGER
Times Staff Writer

British Columbia's New Democratic Party faithful will gather at Vancouver during the next three days to select a new leader.

Delegates will choose from three young MLAs—the main candidates—a successor to Robert Strachan.

And, beyond anything else, whoever is chosen leader will face the problem of convincing this province's voters that the party is a credible alternative to Premier Bennett's government.

Whichever man is chosen, he is convinced he will lead not only a stronger, newer New Democratic Party, but will also lead that party to victory over the Social Credit monolith.

But while the three believe this is possible and while the party faithful continue faithful, the question remains whether anybody else will go along.

Were a majority of B.C. voters to be convinced, the effect would be like being hauled out of a nice warm bed to take a flying leap into a bathtub full of ice cubes, an exercise both stimulating and startling.

Certainly startling. The NDP and its forerunner, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, have been Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition for 28 years.

Long Enough to Build Two Romes

That has been long enough to see two Romes built and one destroyed.

The first was the Liberal-Conservative coalition that fell in 1952 when William Andrew Cecil Bennett played barbarian with a personal version of Social Credit that has appeared all things to most people ever since.

His master stroke was accomplished by crying that the coalition had been in power too long, that it had gone soft, that it had left this resource-rich province prey to—dread word—socialism.

Well, first the Liberals, then the Conservatives and then the two together had run the show for 24 years.

Now Bennett himself has run the show for 17 years and the barbarians are at the gate again. They are all under 40 years old and they cry that the 69-year-old premier has been in power too long, that his government has gone soft, that it has left this resource-rich province prey to—dread words—corporate domination.

They are David Barrett, 31 social worker and member for Coquitlam; Thomas Berger, 36, lawyer and member for Vancouver-Burrard; and Robert Williams, 36, town planner and member for Vancouver East.

They seek a mantle that sent its first wearer, Harold Winch, rushing off to the relative calm of the House of Commons; then it just plain wore out Robert Strachan.

Strachan spent 13 years jibing and jousting across the red carpet with Bennett and says he's too old to continue as leader.

That's his stated reason for retiring and it was a rather pointed jab at the premier, 13 years Strachan's senior.

Achieved a Victory of Sorts

Besides, Strachan achieved a victory of sorts — the highways department has finally begun paving the Lake Cowichan road. The hideous road that cuts through Strachan's Cowichan-Malahat constituency has been a personal cause celebre for so long that it became a standing joke.

And there is an irony in that road being paved. It touches the larger question of highways and hydro-electric dams that the Bennett government has built with a vengeance throughout B.C.

The opposition believe that in its haste to provide the roads and power to meet the needs of a booming resource economy, the government has neglected to meet the educational, hospital and other social needs of individuals within that economy.

There are a couple of curious riddles facing the New Democrats-as-potential-premiers as well.

They can't say they will be a whole new show because Bennett has not been loath to hammer the province's electric utilities and ferry system into public ownership if he felt that was the best way to serve B.C.

And the three have joined the rest of their party in adopting hard-line positions against what they call monopolistic control of the

Bloody Clash Injures 30 As Harvard Sit-In Halted

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 400 policemen swept 200 protesters out of Harvard's University Hall today in a bloody clash that left 30 persons hurt and about 200 under arrest.

The helmeted police, some swinging clubs, stormed through a mass of students to get inside the hall which had been seized Wednesday by youths protesting Harvard's Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

Historic Harvard Yard was alive with turmoil. Whistles, yells, jeers and curses reverberated through the area as police, in tight formations, swept back and forth in skirmished platoons.

Bottles and other objects were hurled at police, some from neighboring buildings.

CARRIED FROM HALL

Many of those arrested were carried bodily from the hall and thrust into police wagons.

In California, a mass sit-in continued at a Stanford University laboratory to protest classified military research on campus.

Student protesters at the New Orleans campus of Southern University forced the closing of the school Wednesday after a clash with police. The college dean locked himself in a office to escape rampaging students.

The sit-in at Harvard, led by members of Students for a Democratic Society, started at noon Wednesday when the students took over the building and forced several deans to leave. One was evicted bodily.

They demanded an immediate end to all Reserve Officers Training Corps programs at Harvard, the oldest college in the United States. President Nathan Pusey said he couldn't take their demands seriously.

Pusey said Harvard has contracts with the military forces. He said these are to be renegotiated in light of a faculty vote to deny academic credit for ROTC course and strip faculty status from ROTC instructors.

In California, an estimated 400 persons began a sit-in Wednesday night at the Stanford University Electronic Laboratory where military research is conducted.

The action followed a three-hour mass meeting where 1,000 persons voted 2 to 1 to begin the sit-in immediately to protest the lack of action by Stanford trustees on demands that there be no more classified military research on campus.

The trustees, meeting Monday, directed the Stanford Research Institute not to undertake any new contracts in chemical and biological warfare research but did not act on the other demands.

In New Orleans, police arrested about 20 persons, all Negroes, during the demonstration at Southern University. The charges ranged from desecration of the American flag to reviling police and resisting arrest.

Th' Warsaw Pact is th' Communists' answer t' NATO—but they seem t' use it mostly against themselves.

'We Must Build Strong Alliance'

(Times News Services)

WASHINGTON—President Nixon today pledged to keep U.S. NATO allies fully informed on the strategic arms control talks with the Soviet Union likely to begin soon.

In an address at the 20th anniversary NATO foreign ministers' meeting he said the talks would be "a test of the ability of the Western nations to shape a common strategy."

Looking to the future, he commented: "We would do well to create new machinery for Western political consultation as well as to make greater use of the process that already exists."

The president made no specific mention of a recurrent Communist suggestion that the NATO nations and the Warsaw Pact governments in the Soviet bloc meet in an effort to end the cold war.

At the initial session of the NATO council this morning, Italy's foreign minister, Pietro Nenni, advocated such a meeting as soon as possible. However, Foreign Minister Joseph Luns of The Netherlands urged a slow approach to such a conference. He recommended that NATO should request clarification by the Communists on their proposal.

OLD CONCEPTS

Nixon confined himself in his prepared remarks to the observation that the time has come for "unfreeezing our old concepts of East versus West, while never losing sight of great ideological differences."

The United States has been wary of an immediate NATO-Warsaw get-together, favoring instead that some solid groundwork be laid by individual conferences between the various governments on both sides.

MAKES PLEDGE

"The United States fully intends to undertake deep and genuine consultation with its allies both before and during any negotiations directly affecting their interests. That is a pledge I shall honor—and I expect to consult at length on the implications of anything that might affect the pattern of East-West relations."

The president proposed these steps for improving consultation machinery of the NATO governments. They were:

- Periodic meetings of deputy foreign ministers "for a high-level review of major, long-range problems before the alliance."
- Creation of a special political planning group to deal specifically and on a continuing basis with long-range problems.
- Establishment of a special committee on "the challenges of modern society" to work "toward improving the quality of life for our peoples."

Nixon acknowledged there are differences of opinion among the NATO members but said they need not become seriously divisive.

He summarized: "I believe we must build an alliance strong enough to deter those who would threaten us; close enough to provide for continuous and far-reaching consultation; trusting enough to accept a diversity of views; realistic enough to deal with the world as it is; flexible enough to explore new channels of constructive co-operation."

NATO AND ITS MYTHS

Times correspondent Anthony Westell in a special dispatch from Washington today on Page 16 tells how Canada got into NATO and also relates some of the myths which have grown up about the organization.

In particular, he puts to rest the notion that NATO was originally conceived to forestall an imminent Soviet invasion of Western Europe, and that the commitment of a large Canadian military force in Europe was an integral part of the original NATO plan.

"By withdrawing forces now," Mr. Westell notes, Canada is not withdrawing from NATO. It is returning . . . to the position in 1949 when NATO was launched."

ABMs Said 'Incredible Mistake'

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, a key scientific adviser to Senate opponents of the Safeguard defence program, says the Nixon administration's decision to build the anti-ballistic missile system is an incredible mistake.

"Security just can't be achieved that way," physicist Lapp said in an interview amplifying on his challenge to the proposed Safeguard ABM system. "It seems to me that this whole business is incredible.

"What we're doing is building up forces that will provoke the Russians into building up unlimited forces."

Lapp, 51, is a long-time critic of the defence department and the Atomic Energy Commission who has had a way of turning out to be right.

HITS AT REASONING

His latest effort strikes at the roots of the administration's reasoning for deploying the controversial Safeguard—that American nuclear missiles must be protected from a Russian nuclear "first strike."

The position was laid out by Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, who told Congress the Soviet Union is building toward a first-strike capability. He based the prediction on reports the Russians are planning to deploy a huge new missile known as the SS-9, capable of carrying one massive warhead or, later, three smaller ones.

Laird said that with the growing number of SS-9 missiles the Soviet Union might reach the point of being able to destroy enough United States Minuteman missile sites that Soviet

Suez Canal Erupts With New Battle

TEL AVIV (CP) — Another battle broke out along the Suez Canal today between artillery and tank units of Israel and Egypt.

An Israeli army spokesman said Egyptian gunners opened fire on Israeli troops near Ismailia in the northern sector of the 103-mile waterway and near Port Taufiq at the southern end.

About a dozen shells had been lobbed from Egypt at Israeli troops two hours earlier, but the Israelis did not return fire, he said.

Cairo radio charged Israeli forces opened up with artillery and tank fire along a 60-mile length of the Suez Canal.

It added the Israelis started firing in the Port Taufiq-Suez area and then extended the battle northward to the region of El Qantara.

ATTACK PATROL

The Israeli spokesman said that Arab guerrillas earlier fired bazooka shells on an Israeli Army patrol near the Sea of Galilee.

The patrol was fired on from across the ceasefire line near Ashdod Ya'acov, about three miles south of the Sea of Galilee, the sources said.

The patrol returned the fire, the sources said. They said one Israeli soldier was wounded in the clash.

. . . NDP LEADERSHIP RACE

forest industry, against light tax rakeoffs on mineral export and against industry's apparent willingness to belch smoke into the air and filth into the rivers.

While these are perhaps admirable things to be against, they smack of political naivete since the resource industries are where the money is at.

However, a number of leaders of the province's forest industry took the three young socialists to dinner a couple of weeks ago at, of all places, Victoria's Union Club and there, over brandy and cigars, they got to know one another.

That, it is duly noted, has never happened before.

Barrett, Berger and Williams. They don't look like roary-eyed socialists. They don't have the suity eminence that one is accustomed to expect of a premier either.

They each have personal themes that encompass much the same thing—they call it democratic socialism.

Premier Bennett's running gag throughout the session was an almost daily morning line on the NDP leadership.

Early on he included Strachan as rumors of a "draft-Bob" movement washed around.

Strachan steadfastly maintained he would not be drafted, he will not run again as leader, and he asked his Cowichan-Malahat organization to cease and desist their attempts to make it otherwise.

So, still warm from the final day of the third session of the 28th legislature, here is Premier Bennett's best bet:

Barrett and Berger even money. Williams is 1,000 to one. "Strachan," said the premier, "has been scratched."

Fourth Considered Out of Race

There is actually a fourth candidate, certainly the farthest left of the lot and generally considered out of the race.

He is John Conway, a 25-year-old teaching assistant at Simon Fraser University.

Conway has joined the other three in a pre-convention stump around the interior, a stump that raised the hackles of several government MLAs who had the four pop up weekends in Social Credit ridings and say unkind things about the government and local representation.

The Times interviewed the three likely contenders.

Barrett, an almost roly-poly man with a tendency to make points during debate with a "Who, me?" double take, is considered by many observers to be, in Premier Bennett's book the biggest threat.

He was a civil servant—this is a story he delights in repeating—working as a personnel and staff training officer at the Haney provincial jail when he declared his affiliation with CCF shortly before the 1960 election. He was fired.

But he won the 1960 election and, as he puts it, is still in the employ of the province.

Barrett says the present B.C. social-economic situation "is not based on the kind of morality that I feel is essential if man is to develop a better society."

What we have, he says, is "a corporate welfare state that deprives almost one-third of its population of the full advantages of participating in our society.

"I don't believe that production should be an end in itself and I don't believe progress should be an end in itself," he says.

BARRETT

BERGER

WILLIAMS

Concerned for Quality of Life

"I'm concerned about the quality of life, not the quantity of accumulated goods on the way through life.

"And I think we can best improve the quality by reducing as much as possible the ruthlessness of the economic structure that we have now — where the haves get more and the have-nots get less and the gap widens."

He sees politics as an extension of social work.

"In a democratic society, politics is a method of getting involved with the people and moving them towards the formation of their own goals and participation in the achievement of those goals."

Barrett hits hardest in the legislature and the handling of social welfare in B.C.

"You see, I don't think it's right that people should be hungry — in Victoria people are hungry. I don't think it's right that people should be housed in filthy conditions. I don't think it's just that young children should be sent to training institutions which are, in fact, jails."

He concludes by saying "any society that measures services to people purely in dollars and cents is a corrupting society."

Berger is urbane, admittedly glib and when he speaks in the legislature he is best operating at white heat and sounding like a prosecutor with a white-slaver in the dock.

He has taken a number of cases to the Supreme Court of Canada including one in which he got the court to upset a B.C. court decision and find Premier Bennett guilty of slandering a former civil servant.

His current cause is the province's 50,000 native Indians and he loosed a whirlpool with charges of police brutality on a reserve at Sechelt.

He has just finished presentation of a case to the B.C. Supreme Court in which he argues that since the government never signed a treaty with the Nishga Indians, the Indians are entitled to ownership of the entire Nass River valley.

Berger says he and his party are out to serve "the people who are unrepresented and unorganized."

He says "the crunch is coming." That is a confrontation between the private corporations and the public's rights to choose methods and scale of resource development.

Berger caused a bit of a stir shortly after his election in 1966 when he turned right around and challenged Strachan for the leadership and lost.

"Observers say Berger is in too much of a hurry," says Berger. "I've been in a hurry all my life. I think that you have to speak up and speak out and if that thrusts you into a position of leadership then you've got to offer leadership."

Williams is taking his first crack at the post. He lectures the government on its errant resources policy and often gets emotionally involved to the point where he is reduced to speechless anger.

Pay-for-Conviction Plan To Be Scrapped: Turner

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner indicated today the pay-for-conviction system for justices of the peace will be ended, as part of a series of changes in the administration of justice in the Northwest Territories.

In a statement issued here on a northern trip, Mr. Turner acknowledged that the present pay system requires revision because the justices are paid only in the case of conviction. He promised "a more satisfactory scheme will be implemented."

The change in the remuneration scheme was one of 74 recommendations made by Mr. Justice W. G. Morrow following an inquiry into territory justice.

Mr. Turner said most of the Morrow recommendations have been implemented. All have been "dealt with" by the justice department. Some of the recommendations fall within the jurisdiction of the justice of peace and others under the territorial government, he said. These recommendations have been brought to the attention of both.

APPLIES TO YUKON

Although the Morrow report deals only with the Northwest Territories many of its recommendations applied to the neighboring Yukon Territory and would be instituted.

The current round of improvements in the Northwest Territories does not preclude a more sophisticated approach to the administration of justice, based, for example, on such recommendations of the Carrothers report as the one suggesting a territorial department of justice, he said. That report was prepared by a 1965-66 inquiry commission headed by Prof. A. W. R. Carrothers, then dean of law at the University of Western Ontario, London.

Mr. Turner said the Carrothers report, which recommended more self-government for the territory, is receiving "sympathetic consideration in the light of constitutional and practical considerations."

The justice minister provided a long list of changes in the administration of justice both in Hay River, a transportation centre, and the territory at large.

MORE OPEN SYSTEM

Some of the steps involved the making of the Hay River court system more open to the public. The courtroom has been given a press table and dates and times for court hearings are made readily available to the public and news media by the RCMP detachment which polices the territory.

Signs outside the court building are to say when court will be in session. In the absence of the head of the RCMP Hay River detachment, a subordinate will release information to the news media.

Other changes for the Hay River area include a rotation system for the calling of justices of the peace to work. Justice-of-the-peace courts have been placed on a regular timetable.

For the territory as a whole, Mr. Turner disclosed that "favorable consideration" is being given to a Morrow recommendation that drunkenness as such should not be treated as a crime. Discussions between Ottawa and the Northwest Territories commissioners are under way on the recommendation.

APPRAISE LEGAL AID

Also, the government plans an independent appraisal of the legal aid scheme. Two part-time crown attorneys have been assigned to assist Orville Troy, the territory's crown attorney.

Solomon Samuels, assistant deputy minister of the justice department, has been given direct responsibility for departmental matters in the territory.

Steps have been taken to supply justices of the peace with operating manuals and other information related to the law. The justice of the peace system will be retained.

Courtrooms have been separated from police buildings. Future building programs will continue this practice.

The RCMP will continue to police Hay River and Yellowknife until both communities become much bigger.

RUSSIA REJECTS BOMB STOP BID

GENEVA (Reuters) — The Soviet Union today rejected American proposals for an internationally controlled cut-off in the production of fissionable material—the essential ingredient in a nuclear bomb.

Chief Soviet negotiator Alexei Rochshin said the United States plan would not reduce existing nuclear arsenals.

He told the 17-nation disarmament conference the plan was prompted "mainly by the overproduction of nuclear materials designed for military uses in the U.S."

The Soviet negotiator said the U.S. proposals contained "but one new point which is to use for control not the special verification system (bilateral inspection) but the International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards."

American negotiator Adrian S. Fisher Tuesday proposed inspection by the agency to overcome previous Soviet charges that mutual inspection could lead to spying. A U.S. spokesman described the plan as "a major shift in inspection policy."

The Soviet reply today without actually saying so was seen by observers to mean that it is not the question of inspection that troubles Russia but the questionable value of a cut-off in the first place.

Roshchin also asked whether the U.S., Britain, France and Canada are still interested in proposals made 11 years ago to assume an obligation not to use nuclear weapons except in self defence.

Suggesting this could be a step toward a total ban on the use of nuclear weapons, he said: "To our mind, the task is to narrow step by step the sphere of possible use of nuclear weapons, and the greater the sphere of restrictions of banning the use of nuclear weapons, the better."

leaders would be tempted to initiate a first strike.

In a report prepared voluntarily for senators opposing the Safeguard, Lapp said the SS-9 is not intended to give a first-strike capability because even a large-scale attack would not guarantee the Soviets against retaliation.

By 1976, he said, the SS-9 probably would be able to deliver 1,000 five-megaton warheads —but 4,000 would be needed to neutralize the American missile forces.

GUILTY OF ERROR

To compound his mathematical challenge, he says the defence department is guilty of incredible error in "assuming that the Russians would assume that no United States missiles would be fired immediately after it was learned a nuclear attack was under way."

This challenge to the military is the latest in a series that began 20 years ago, when he was teaching nuclear physics at George Washington University.

He was the first scientist to warn publicly, in 1954, of the potential radioactive fallout terrors of the hydrogen bomb—long before the Atomic Energy Commission admitted the danger.

Although Lapp worked on the original atomic bomb—as a physicist in the historic Manhattan project—his forecasts were made long after he left government service. He was one of the first to forecast that China would perfect the hydrogen bomb in a relatively short time as it did.

He now makes his living writing books, magazine articles and giving lectures.

Profs Score U.S. Invasion

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Carleton University professors say it is alarming that Canadians make up probably less than half of the permanent faculty member in Canadian universities.

They presented their views on this situation in a brief today to hearings here of the commission on relations between universities and government.

The professors, Robin Mathews and James Steele of the university's English department, recommend that provincial government pass legislation on certain aspects of job advertising and hiring in an effort to remedy the situation.

50 Observers At Symposium

Twenty-five secondary school students who wrote papers on a variety of subjects will meet at the University of Victoria Friday and Saturday for the third annual Humanities and Science Symposium.

Sponsored by the university and the IBM, the symposium will examine and discuss each paper. Besides the 25 presenters, 24 sponsor teachers and 50 observers have been chosen to attend the affair.

Faculty members chosen for their expertise in the field covered by the papers will chair each of the 12 sessions.

The symposium will open at 9 a.m. Friday in the Phoenix Theatre with a welcome by acting president Dean Robert Wallace and talk by Pierre Berton on "The New Communication."

The 25 papers were selected from a field of 170 from around the province.

The Weather and You

By Carl Riblet Jr.

The crowded, older sections of every large city give their dwellers warmer weather, on the average, than is experienced by those who live farther out — away from the urban heat island. The reason, of course, is crowding of both people and buildings.

If you live or work in such a heat island, it probably has narrow streets and tall buildings that form deep canyons that keep out the sun much of the day. The walls of those buildings radiate heat toward each other instead of toward the sky, and the buildings store heat in the daytime and give it off slowly during the night-time.

Simultaneously, the heating and incinerating processes going on in the city, plus the heat radiated from the bodies of you and your neighbors, add heat to the air. That's mainly the reason why the city is warmer than the countryside.

S. Saskatchewan Braces for Flood

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Flood waters were climbing higher today in southern Saskatchewan with temperatures rising to the mid-50 above range and more snow melting.

The director of Saskatchewan's Emergency Measures Organization, Gordon Tanner, pointed to Lumsden, located 30 miles northwest of Regina, as the point in the greatest immediate danger.

Volunteer workers in that community of 400 had put about 10,000 sandbags along 1,000 feet of the Qu'Appelle river by Wednesday night and a further 2,000 feet of diking still had to be built.

Tanner told a news conference in Regina the first peak of the river flow likely will hit Lumsden Friday. There were about 75 volunteer workers on sandbag duty Wednesday night.

Residents of a small village near Estevan, 110 miles southeast of Regina, were evacuated Wednesday, although flood control officials said they were not in immediate danger.

A creek overflowed and flooded some homes and businesses at Weyburn, 60 miles southeast of Regina. Water had covered a highway to a depth of about three feet by mid-afternoon Wednesday.

In the meantime, Moose Jaw has been bracing for peak flows on the Moose Jaw river, expected during the weekend.

•

Tanner said that EMO has obtained 100,000 sandbags for distribution to communities in danger of flooding.

"So far, every precaution we have taken has been found necessary," he said.

In Oxbow, a town of 1,700 located 40 miles east of Estevan, the domestic water supply has been cut off. Flood waters in the Souris River have risen eight feet above the normal level and covered the well from which the town draws its water.

Surging Sioux River Defeats Flood Fighters

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flood fighters surrendered an 18-square-block area of Sioux Falls, S.D., to the surging Big Sioux River today after a night-long battle to plug a 100-foot break in a dike in the city's Riverside district.

"We dumped in more than 100 tons of rock, we threw in car bodies and anything else we could lay our hands on," said Joe Vanderloo, Minnehaha County civil defence director, shortly before daybreak. "But it was undermining faster than we could fill it up.

"After eight hours we finally gave up."

BOULDERS WASHED AWAY

The entire area, which contains a meat-packing plant, the Sioux Falls stockyards and about 50 homes, was evacuated and sealed off by roadblocks. Waters are expected to reach a depth of 25 to 30 feet before cresting.

Vanderloo said pressure of the rising river—swollen by the melting of heavy winter snows—washed away boulders in front of the dike early Wednesday evening, and the dike itself went out soon after.

Some 90 miles downstream, the Big Sioux lapped at levees where it flows into the Missouri at Sioux City, Iowa, and residents of the Iowa community of Cherokee waited in emergency shelters for the Little Sioux to crest.

Twenty miles upstream from the mouth of the Big Sioux six-foot waves threatened to topple a dike at the little Iowa town of Akron.

In the flood-hit Sioux City, Iowa, area police were put on 12-hour watches after a threat was received to blow up the dike and let flood waters inundate the northern area of the city, where conditions were worst.

Across the river from Sioux City, Mayor Albert Streeter of North Sioux City, S.D., said: "This is the most water we have ever had here."

The population of 800 was evacuated to Sioux City and put up for the night in Red Cross emergency quarters.

The Big Sioux, swollen from a heavy snow melt in southern Minnesota and northern Iowa, flows into the Missouri at the junction of Sioux City, North Sioux City and South Sioux City, Neb.

SAVE HOUSE TRAILERS

Seven house trailers were pulled from a flooding area in North Sioux City Wednesday afternoon. In the northwest Sioux City suburb of Riverside, workers labored to build a 4½-foot sandbag dike to prevent worsening of a flood which drove about 40 families from their homes.

Ninety families were evacuated from Cherokee on the Little Sioux but the worst was over there, officials said.

In southwestern Minnesota at Windom, the rampaging west fork of the Des Moines completely cut off the northwest corner of the town of 3,691 persons.

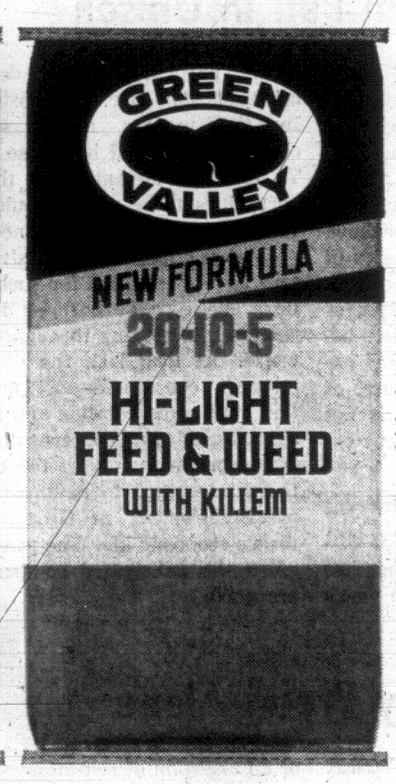
The big 2 for B.C. lawns

Green Valley 12-4-8 is just what the name says – a 'super' lawn builder, specially formulated for British Columbia soil conditions. It's the same formula used on local golf courses and parks, with plant nutrients for immediate and long-term benefit. And it's pelleted for easy, dust-free application. If your lawn is relatively free of weeds, but badly in need of nourishment . . . this is the mix it needs.



Green Valley 20-10-5 Hi-Light Feed & Weed is a two-in-one product that lets you feed your lawn and kill weeds in a single application. It contains Killem, a special herbicide formula that controls chickweed, clover, dandelions and other lawn weeds. It's also an excellent fertilizer, providing long-term nourishment for your lawn. If your lawn is not only weak and scrawny, but weed-infested, too . . . this is the answer.

Two Trends: One Answer

THE DILEMMA OF THE WORLD was graphically demonstrated on the front page of this newspaper yesterday. A powerfully written article by George Wald on the left side of the page portrayed the insanity of our times, when the divided human race subjects itself to the threat of nuclear annihilation through the existence of stockpiles representing the equivalent of "15 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on earth." On the right side of the page a Prague dispatch described the fate of a country not strong enough to assert its rights against a giant neighbor, with its press muzzled and its freedom leaders being forced out of the government.

On the one hand was the potentially suicidal situation that results from a policy of defensive armament carried to its (militarily) logical extremes. On the other, a sobering reminder that in its current state of evolution the world presents serious hazards for countries which are unable to assert their own sovereignty. Many a citizen of the United States, reading of the tragic Czech predicament, must have reasoned: There, but for the grace of our nuclear deterrent, go I. And he then might have been moved so to increase that deterrent that in itself it becomes a threat which another country must match or exceed.

While unilateral disarmament has often been proposed as a feasible policy which would present a sterling example to all nations and invite them to emulation, the cold fact of life on this planet is that it could be extremely dangerous unless the country concerned was covered by defensive assurances from an armed neighbor or group of them, and in this case it would be obliged to participate in one way or another in order to preserve its entity.

But this is no argument against disarmament, for disarmament remains the prime need of the world today. It merely recognizes that effective disarmament must be bilateral, multilateral. And the natural conclusion to be drawn from this is that almost every other international concern should be placed second to the prime task of agreeing on a workable system of arms reduction to an eventual token level.

In this connection the nuclear non-proliferation treaty should quickly be ratified by all the nations concerned—both nuclear producers and potential receivers of the bomb—and made a salient part of the international structure. It should be followed by talks on an urgent basis with a view to reducing existing nuclear stockpiles and conventional armaments.

The world has had all too many examples in this century of the hollowness of victory and the lethal drain of conflict; clearly in the twentieth century war is proving itself to be the most non-productive of national enterprises, the most dangerous of national policies. Governments in all parts of the world are far behind their people in recognizing this new fact.

They Can Pull in Unison

NATIONAL HARBOR BOARD chairman Howard Mann's description of Victoria's Ogden Point administration as a "classic cauldron of confusion" is probably more graphic than convincing. Certainly, various federal departments have jurisdiction over different phases of operation, maintenance and improvement. When there is lack of communication or co-operation between them, obvious delays and obstructions occur in development of the harbor potentials. This is not confined to federal government operations.

But because there are different jurisdictions involved, it is important today to bring all interests together in the projected study of the port's future, particularly in its development as a stop-over for tourist ships. In the months ahead several calls are scheduled by cruise ships. To take full advantage of the opportunities these visits should provide, close co-ordination is needed.

Victoria has an impressive history as a port of call for such traffic. The type of business it represents is increasing throughout the world. At long last, the different interests concerned—port authorities, local transportation and tourist agencies, shipping concerns and federal departments—have the chance to pull together to restore an important element in Greater Victoria's economic life. The prospects, given the anticipated co-operation, are good.

Not by Bread Alone

IN VANCOUVER THIS WEEK the B.C. Teachers' Federation moved quickly and wisely to quash resolutions implying that the organization's objective was basically to improve salary and working conditions for teachers. The emphasis was placed, rather, on the improvement of educational opportunities for young British Columbians and the strengthening of the teacher's image in support of that aim.

The action taken by the majority is open to two interpretations. In the first instance the federation membership generally understood the adverse public relation impact of an assertion of self-interest as its chief concern. The second and more altruistic interpretation could be that teachers, recognizing other factors than the dollars and cents listed on their pay cheques, wish it understood that they are deeply concerned in the improvement of education.

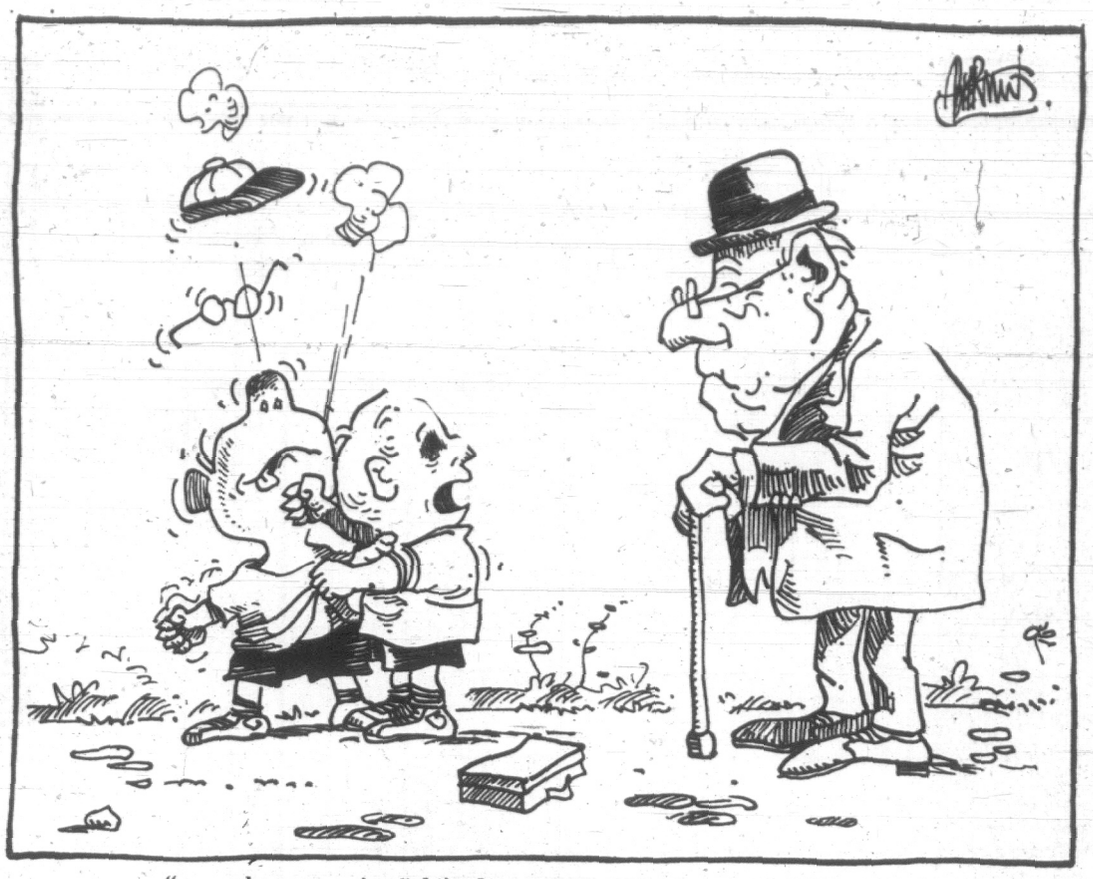
The validity of either impression will be tested, of course, when the next round of negotiations opens on what has become almost invariably an annual demand for higher pay and better working conditions. The position of the federation has been well taken and now awaits substantiation in action.

For Quick Results

THE HOSTEL FOR GIRLS TO be opened shortly on Fernwood Road is a good example of what can be accomplished by ordinary citizens through determined leadership and a knowledge of what government help is available. It is also a prime illustration of the quick results that can be achieved by a group of those whose power should never be underestimated.

The hostel will cater to girls who require a temporary low-cost home while finding jobs which will enable them to move out on their own. These form a class which heretofore has received little help, for attention has been focused on more desperate cases of need. But the hostel will serve a very worthy purpose—and will have the added advantage that it will be self-supporting.

Mrs. John Di Castri and her coworkers who are responsible for the new venture are to be congratulated on a very worthy project and a timely addition to the community's facilities for youth.



". . . who says we're fighting? . . . we're playing peace talks . . ."

Where's the Cream?

What has happened to milk? We get a mixture called "homo milk." Formerly we could leave a bottle of milk overnight and get, perhaps, half an inch of cream on the top next morning—not now. What has happened to real cream? We have whipping cream, sour cream, coffee cream, cream-mo, cream-mee, but no genuine thick cream which needs no whipping! Where does it go?

I wonder if it is still possible to get clotted cream in England—Devonshire or Cornish—and if so, why can't we get it here?—Barbara Collings, 1264 Faithful.

Heart and Soul

I was interested in the article by Lester Kinsolving, Saturday, March 29 re the soul and heart transplants.

According to the Tibetan Masters the soul leaves the body at death. Consciousness is the manifestation of the soul throughout creation in varying degrees from sensitivity and instinct, expanding spiritually to the higher plains of perception and clairaudience. It is at birth anchored to the pituitary gland in the head, giving intelligence, also in the heart, giving life through the blood stream and sensitivity of love and emotions.

This gives food for thought, does it not?—H. K. Stone, 1683 Knight.

FROM TORONTO

By HAROLD GREER

The Doctor Prescribes the Raise

THE Ontario government's decision to accept a 10 per cent increase in doctors' fees as the basis for benefits under the Ontario Medical Services Insurance Plan has dispelled any lingering doubts about how strong is the grip which the medical profession now has on the public purse in this province. The opposition parties are calling it a "unilateral capitulation" to the doctors and the phrase seems accurate enough, considering this is the second time since OMSIP began that the government has gone along with a fee increase with nothing more than a verbal "ouch."

Greer

By law, OMSIP must pay its subscribers' medical bills on the basis of 90 per cent of the fee set by the OMA. A physician may bill OMSIP directly, or he may bill the patient, either for the full amount or for the 10 per cent difference. There are practical advantages, however, in dealing with OMSIP; about 75 per cent of physicians have been doing so, and most of these have been accepting OMSIP's cheque as full payment, largely because over half of OMSIP's subscribers are low-income earners for whom the government pays all or part of the premium cost.

But OMSIP payments are not geared automatically to the OMA fee schedule. If the schedule is changed, as it is every two years, the law must be changed too if the 90 per cent ratio to current fees is to be maintained. Thus a 10 per cent increase in the fee schedule would mean, in the absence of legislative change, that OMSIP subscribers are covered for only about 80 per cent of their doctors' bills, which in turn would undoubtedly cause more and more doctors to bill subscribers for the 20 per cent difference.

This would not only be a hardship on the low-income subscribers, it would undermine the whole philosophy of the plan and the government naturally does not want this to happen—especially when it can cushion the impact of an increase in fees by accepting it. Thus, under the old fee schedule, a $10 charge could be settled in most cases with a $9 OMSIP cheque; the charge under the new schedule has now become $11 but the government can reasonably expect most doctors will accept $10 if the law is changed whereas they are likely to bill the patient for the $2 difference if it is not. In effect, the government's choice is between an 11 or a 22 per cent increase medical bills for OMSIP subscribers.

Public Interest Captive

One may therefore sympathize with the government's dilemma. Yet the hard question remains whether any government should allow itself to be put in such a bind, in which the public interest is delivered captive to the medical or any other profession.

The question really comes down to what increases, if any, in the OMA fee schedule are justified. And it is precisely this question which cannot be answered because there are no rules, or indeed any information, to go by.

Enquiry of the OMA elicits the answer that the yardstick used was the DBS index of industrial wages and salaries (a comparison which the Hall Federal Commission on Health Services also seemed to favor) which, it is claimed, has actually outpaced increases in the OMA schedule over the past two years.

Highly Misleading

The argument, however, is highly misleading. It ignores the fact that the index went up month by month (and sometimes down) while doctors' incomes went up 15 per cent in one fell swoop at the outset. Thus, as between a doctor and say a business executive with identical salaries on April 1, 1967, the doctor would be several hundreds of dollars ahead by November of 1968 if the executive's income followed DBS index of industrial salaries and wages for that period.

Nor are there any statistics available to indicate just how changes in the over 2,000 fees in the OMA schedule actually affect a physician's income. A 10 per cent increase in the charge for an office visit obviously produces more income than a 20 per cent increase for a house call, since doctors rarely make house calls. Overall, federal taxation statistics for 1966 show that the average taxable income for Ontario's 5,834 reporting physicians was $22,742—well above consulting engineers and architects, lawyers, dentists, and accountants. On the basis of fee increases since then, this figure would appear to be about $28,000 now.

This is not to suggest that the average Ontario doctor is not worth $28,000 a year but simply that the public has no say in the matter and that, with the advent of government medicare and a refusal to control fees, the restraining influence of the usual economic determinants (never very high) has virtually disappeared. Doctors do not normally compete for patients and medical progress has created what appears to be a chronic shortage of medical manpower. One cannot shop around for a cheaper rate and poverty is no defence.

The government, of course, could say it will pay so much and no more. But the doctors would simply bill patients for the difference. And any attempt at government control of fees would probably lead, if not to a strike, at least to a manpower flight to the United States.

'Show Cause'

If there is an escape from all this, it would seem to lie in some form of public "show cause" procedure whereby the profession would be required to support its fee schedule against cross-examination and challenge. Up to now, the OMA has adamantly maintained that fees are simply not negotiable and Health Minister Dr. Dymond has clearly failed — assuming he has even tried—to shake the doctors in that view. His replacement as Minister of Health would seem to be a necesary first step in convincing the profession it must change its mind.

By JAMES RESTON

Defence Cutback—$25 Billion Question

THE strategy of the Nixon administration is now beginning to come clear. The indications are that the President has decided to reduce the level of violence at once in Vietnam, begin withdrawing substantial forces from the conflict by the end of 1969, and negotiate a cease-fire, a compromise settlement and a complete withdrawal of American troops from that country by the end of 1970.

Reston

There are, of course, many variables in this strategy. President Nixon's pricipal advisers, for example, are divided now over just how many men can be pulled out this year — the figures at issue are from 50,000 to 100,000 — and they are also divided over continuing or reducing the present level of search and destroy missions in Vietnam, but the general direction of policy has apparently been set. It is toward de-escalation and disengagement and this has already started a quiet struggle over the post-Vietnam defence budget.

Challenging Pentagon

The debate over the antiballistic missile system is only the beginning of it. The scope and scale of the battle over the defence budget has not yet emerged in public, but in private here it is developing into a major effort, not merely to cut the armed services back by a few billions, but to challenge many of the basic assumptions of the Pentagon and swing it back from around $80 billion a year to $50 or $55-billion.

This is the really big political confrontation that is over the horizon in America, and it dwarfs all the other confrontations over the cities and the races, and the universities, and poverty and the health services, for it is a $25-billion question that influences not only defence policy but the whole field of social and political reconstruction.

This is not the kind of fundamental question President Nixon likes. His way is to modify existing policies and to give the impression of change without changing things very much. But he is faced with radical and even dangerous problems which cautious adjustments will not remove. After all the polite talk and Sunday supplement articles about the military-industrial complex, there are now powerful men and forces in this country which are finally determined to take this issue by the throat and force a major reallocation of national resources away from military defence and toward reconstruction on the home front.

The Pentagon, the lobbyists for the aerospace industries and the powerful Congressmen whose districts benefit from the big defence contracts have recognized this coming defence budget battle quicker than the politicians, preachers, publicists and students who are writing and demonstrating for social reconstruction in this country.

They are already arguing that after the end of the Vietnam war it will be essential to develop the new weapons systems that have been postponed because of the war in Vietnam. They are not very original but they are very determined. They are warning on Capitol Hill at precisely the right points of power about a new "missile gap." They are talking about "new intelligence" that "proves" the Soviets have an intercontinental first-strike missile that can destroy American defences and place United States' security in jeopardy.

Therefore, while they admit that the defence budget has to be cut some after Vietnam to make more money available for the problems at home, they are arguing with considerable skill that we must be "realistic" and keep the cuts to a very few billion.

This appeal to national pride and fear of the Soviet may not be very original, but it is directed very accurately at the key men in Congress whose power and political interests rests on a continuation of vast military budgets.

Also the new Secretary of Defence, Melvin Laird of Wisconsin, is the only man in the Nixon Cabinet who has a powerful political constituency of his own. He has great influence with the political leaders of the Republican party. His personal view of how to defend the country coincides very closely to the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the views of Chairmen Russell and Stennis and the other military-oriented elders of the Congress, and this is a formidable coalition not only of political but of military, industrial, and one must now add labor union forces that would like to keep the military budget about where it is, even after Vietnam.

This is not a political conspiracy. These are not cynical men. They honestly think that the best way to defend the country from its external enemies, keep the national economy boming along, and minimize unemployment is to maintain a defence budget of from $75 to $80 billion.

The issue is really philosophical. How best to defend the nation? What threatens it most — its external enemies or its internal divisions and chaos? And specifically, whether to take $20 to $25 billion out of the military budget for the home front, or go on assuming that the external threat is greater than anything else.

Truman Era Comparison

These issues will come up even if the Administration's de-escalation and disengagement policies in Vietnam do not work. The country has gone through these same arguments about how much money had to be voted for the Pentagon in the Truman Administration — only then the hawks were saying we would be destroyed if we didn't vote $15 billion for military defence, and the doves were saying the budget had to be kept to $10 or $12 billion.

The difference now is that the military have prevailed for over a generation, and even with over $75 billion for military defence, the external problems remain and the internal problems have become much more serious. So we are now approaching a defence budget debate of major proportions, for only by deep cuts in this budget will it be possible to pay for the reconstruction programs on the home front.

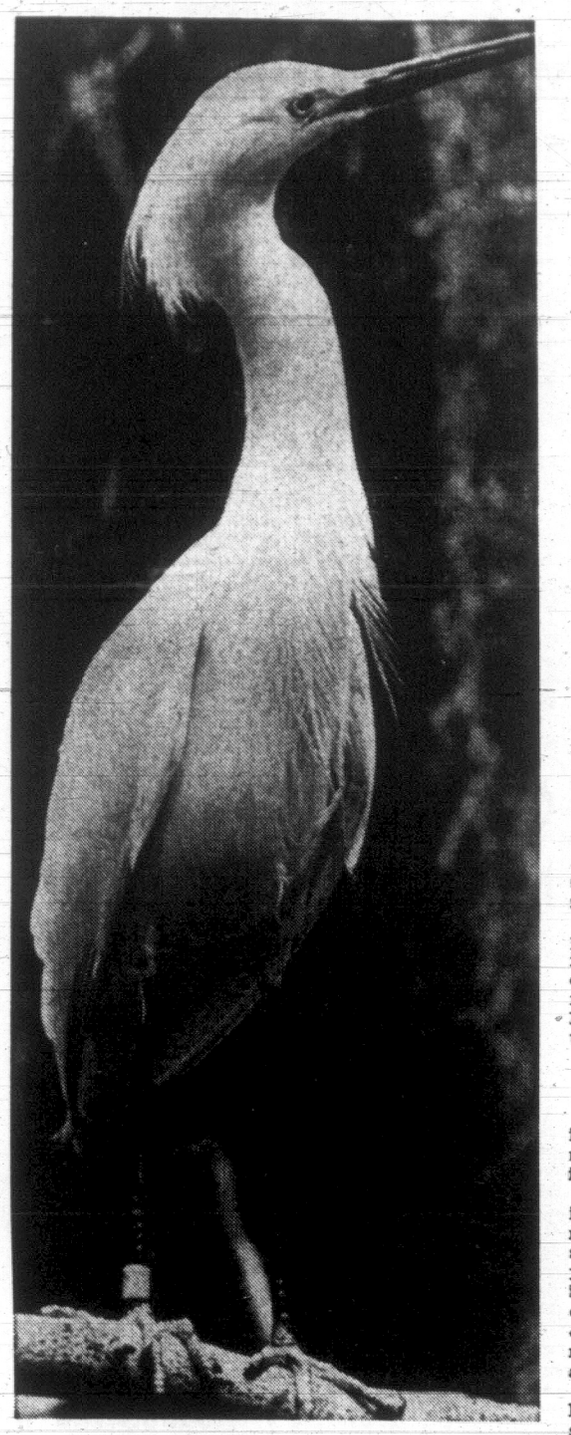
"DOES DADDY KNOW YOU'RE PLAYIN' BRIDGE WITH HIS POKER CHIPS?"

Looking Back

From the Times, April 10, 1909.

Yesterday afternoon there was borne to the grave at the little Indian cemetery, facing the entrance of the harbor, one of the last links connecting the Songhees tribe with the days of Douglas. Followed by a considerable number of tribesman the remains of "Old Peter" — Peter Swalpanah — were laid to rest. The death of Old Peter leaves only one old timer — Jack Sputite — a nonogenarian and very feeble.



The delicate plumes of the snowy egret became so fashionable during the late 19th Century that hunters nearly killed off the species. Today, the United States has sanctuaries in South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana and Texas to protect the birds.

They'll All Go If We Keep Muddling Along

By JASHUA LEDERBERG

The importance of wildlife as an esthetic resource that enhances the quality of our own lives is universally understood. It is also an indispensable reminder of our own place in the natural world.

We are, however, as careless with the protection of endangered animal species as we are with our own.

Wild species are disappearing under our very eyes as we complete the exploitation of the plant, destroy specialized habitats, dump our wastes into air and sea and recklessly harvest the whales, the big cats, the seals, the alligators and what have you for the most frivolous or replaceable human purposes.

Most wild species are probably doomed, in the long run, in the face of the growth of human population. And we may not be far behind them. But this is hardly good reason to rush that doom.

Head It Off

In fact, if we can postpone it for a century or so, we might even find ways to avert it.

For that reason, any plausible help ought to be mobilized. But legislation was stalled in the U.S. senate last year, for example, that would have broadened the protection of endangered species against commercial depredation by regulating their shipment into and within the U.S.

The only opposition to such laws came from an irresponsible part of the fur trade, whose natural supplies will soon evaporate if they are not promptly protected.

The best advertised arguments for wildlife protection are the esthetic and moral ones. These reach the passions more easily than the votes and dollars of the electorate.

In fact, however, a diversified wildlife is a perishable resource of vast but unpredictable economic value.

The variety of species is a great library of information, literally encoded in the specific DNA molecules that characterize each type.

The polar bear's white coat provides camouflage when hunting the seal for food but has been of little help in hiding from hunters who stalk it in small airplanes.

It is paradoxical that, in this era of most rapid elimination of natural variety, we have begun to learn the keys to that code and to appreciate the subtleties of the evolutionary mechanism that it drives.

Each different species is a unique adaptation to its own way of life, a lesson in "how to live" that we can never properly understand after we extinguish it.

At a more practical level, we have only begun to domesticate the range of plant and animal species, that we might exploit for highly specialized uses.

The very wide use of rhesus monkey tissues for growing virus vaccines is an example that would have been beyond imagination 50 years ago; the rhesus may not last another 20 years.

A rare species of hamster is now very important in cancer research; this could not have been predicted 20 years ago.

The orangutan is disappearing in the forests of Borneo. This one among man's closest relatives might be the key to understanding how the brain works, or to the farming of hearts for transplant or, most likely of all, to answering questions we do not yet know how to ask.

A few isolated specimens in the zoos are all we have to count on for breeding stock, and there are already so few that much of the potential variety within that species is irretrievably lost, even if close-bred orangutans will survive at all.

Clear Policy

What we need most of all is a clear policy to respond to the accelerating loss of all wildlife where we do not make careful plans to prevent it.

We cannot save every species, and we should not be shifting our attention from one to another with every shrill outcry about the Hawaiian nukupuu or the Mongolian wild ass. We ought to frame a policy that we know how to pursue and enforce for the effective preservation of the species that can be saved.

When we see clearly which ones we might abandon, we can also reckon the balance of merits and costs in adopting them too. If we muddle along as we have been doing, they will all go.

During this process, our museums of natural history must be transformed into more effective depositories of what can be saved from the dying remains.

Here, modern biology may offer unexpected contributions to a museum's responsibility; the preservation in cold storage of tissue samples of representative animals.

Although most bounties have been removed for the pelts of the timber wolf, extensive hunting in the past and loss of rangeland has reduced them to the danger point in the United States. The wolf, also a rarity here, is protected on Vancouver Island.

Only Hidden Aggressors Would Know War Declared

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

In the age of Overkill the most frightful thing that can happen to man is atomic war. Or is it?

An airplane spraying botulinus toxin into New York City's already befouled air could leave 8 million people dead in six hours.

If the plane carried a nerve gas of the phosphonothiolate family, it might get the job done in less than three.

"CBW: Chemical and Biological Warfare," a new book edited by biochemist Steven Rose from talks given at a CBW symposium last year in London, does little to ease our anxieties over such chilling possibilities.

★ ★ ★

In fact, Britain's Lord Ritchie-Calder tells us in the book's introduction, a CBW war need never even be declared. "It could go on for years," he says, "with only the hidden aggressors knowing what was happening.

"Then, successive crop failures, devastation of herds by disease, unexplained human epidemics and a catastrophic fall in the birth-rate would reveal the truth."

For all the devastation they deliver, CBW weapons have been used widely only once in the 100 years man has had them.

★ ★ ★

The Germans started it, and in 1915 their first chlorine attack broke the Allied front and caused 15,000 casualties, a third of them immediately fatal. Six months later, the British and French retaliated and both sides swapped gas at least a dozen times before stopping Sept. 27, 1918.

In the half century since, the only use of gas in war has been in Yemen, where Egyptian forces supporting the Yemeni republicans are said to have used mustard gas and nerve gas four times against Yemeni royalists in the Yemeni civil war.

When the Egyptians began pulling out of Yemen late in 1967, world opinion had begun to stoke up against the use of gas, and suddenly found itself with no target for its anger.

In search of such a target the world found one lurking in Vietnam, not the war itself, but napalm and the defoliants and chemicals that killed off rice crops.

"The practice of aerial spraying for purposes of defoliation and crop destruction," writes renowned British lawyer Ian Brownlie, "was clearly not foreseen by the various legal controls relating to the conduct of war."

Is Canada Approaching The Age of Press Ombudsmen?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

(From Sweden)

The press in Sweden maintains what is translated into English, rather romantically, as the Court of Honor. A group can file a complaint with the court when he or it believes that a newspaper has treated him or it in a way which, without being criminal, "militates against the citizen, an organization, any dictates of honor or is of a nature which for other reasons should not remain unchallenged."

Fisher

The court examines the complaint and if it decides the paper has behaved badly it says so, explaining why, and the offending paper prints the "judgment" without comment.

Clearly this sort of rectitude and professional responsibility has not found formal or "industry-wide" or "industry-supported" channels in Canada. We've nothing like it.

But we may be closer to it than appears. Sen. Keith Davey has the Upper Chamber going on a committee investigation which will touch, in part, on this matter of the aggrieved citizen. And Mr. Trudeau has a task force burrowing on government information.

While the latter subject may seem far from a press Court of Honor, two members of the force who visited Sweden spent some time checking on how the Swedes enforce press ethics.

There is the further link of Canada to the subject in Mr. Trudeau's challenges to the press, after his London outburst, to consider their ways of presenting the private lives of politicians.

The secretary of the Swedish Court of Honor is Paul Frisch, a Norwegian who spent time in Swedish jails for espionage on behalf of the Allies in the war against Hitler.

Mr. Frisch, as a student of the world press, says rather drolly that "it's ironical that in Sweden where the press carries discretion to an excess, compared say to Britain or Canada, that the method of the Court of Honor has been found inadequate."

★

The Swedes want more protection for the citizen from the press. So do many newspapermen. And it is coming, not by government decree or through a government board, but through a press ombudsman supported jointly by publishers, the national association of editors and by the reporters' union.

When one finds that Swedish papers do not write about suicides, divorces, adultery or criminal cases where conviction leads to a penalty of less than two years, the wonder grows how without such grist for sensation and personal hurt there is work for a press ombudsman.

The explanation centres on the phenomenal growth in circulation of two evening tabloids in Stockholm.

★

One is owned by a long-time and distinguished publishing house which puts out a sedate morning paper. It is also an organ of the Liberal Party. The ruling party, the Social Democrats, have the rival tabloid in Stockholm.

Indeed, almost every Swedish paper has a political affiliation and the parties draw a cash subsidy from the government in ratio to their electoral support, which is intended to keep newspaper that back parties alive. It seems the Socialists use the money for this purpose, while the "free enterprise" parties use it to finance their organizations.

These tabloids have lots of pictures, including "skin" stuff, a brassy typography, much sports news, advice to the lovelorn, "in depth" stories of luminous personalities, and much on youth, love and marriage.

They also have much vivid political writing. But the papers are a far cry from Hush or Flash. They seem no more aggressive than The Telegram or Star of the '50s.

What seems clear is that the Swedes have much more sensitivity to privacy and individual rights than we do. It's a fetish. At the same time, they believe strongly in freedom of the press and total freedom in the area of government and political information.

In fact, another aspect examined by the visiting Canadian taskers was a Swedish parliamentary committee which is investigating the proposition that Sweden should rule that nothing in government be secret (so different from us).

The press in Sweden agrees. It thinks it spends too much time digging and working in the open offices of bureaucracy.

Therefore, the new dispensation—and this sounds like a Trudeauism—is that the government departments and boards must regularly advertise and publish, especially in dailies and magazines, clear, popular accounts of their activities, services and costs.

★

If our press is much more indiscreet, prying and evocative on personal behavior than the Swedish press, there is, comparatively speaking, all the more reason why our press (and the Senate investigators) should consider and propose Courts of Honor or press ombudsmen.

If our secrecy-prone government in Ottawa is considering a marked change to a forceful, more popular information service, it should note that the Swedes, pushing ahead in this area, go on from a base principle we need badly:

Nothing in government is secret, unless Parliament approves and votes that it be so.

THE GALLUP POLL

Lack of Discipline Blamed on Parents

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Over the past 15 years there has been a slowly mounting opinion trend that discipline in our public schools is not strict enough. In 1954, 35 per cent of Canadian adults said there was need for more discipline in schools; today that ratio has risen to 44 per cent.

More criticism, for lack of order, comes from people with a high school or technical school education—47 per cent. Those with university backgrounds (31 per cent) are least likely to condemn public schools for lack of discipline.

An unusual factor is that adults from the university educational level are about twice as likely to be undecided as the others.

The question: "Do you think that discipline in the public schools in this area is too strict, or not strict enough?"

	1954	Today
Too strict	3%	2%
Not strict enough	35	44
About right	45	37
Undecided	17	17

Following are tables showing how those in different levels of education feel about discipline in public schools:

	Public School	High or Technical	University
Too strict	2%	2%	3%
Not strict enough	44	47	31
About right	39	36	38
Undecided	15	15	28

Among the 44 per cent who feel that discipline in public schools is not strict enough, five-in-ten people blame parents. They think the lack of discipline begins in the home. Boards of education are also censured (27 per cent) for lack of order in schools with teachers blamed, third on the list, by 18 per cent.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Deductible Carryovers Worth Saving for a Year

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, CA

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

Now that individual taxpayers have faced, or are just about to face, the facts of their 1968 income taxes it is timely to offer some tax-saving ideas for the current year.

Those 1968 medical bills which were not enough to claim for last year should be put away, not thrown away. They may be grouped with 1969 medical bills within a 12-month period so that expenses in late 1968 with those of early 1969 may, together, make up enough to exceed 3 per cent of income in 1969.

It is not possible to arrange the time of illness but it is quite sensible to make prompt payment of a doctor's account if it will bring the amount within the 12-month span from the previous heavy bill.

Generous people whose charitable donations exceeded their 10 per cent of net income maximum in 1968 should save the receipts, for the excess can be claimed in 1969. It is important that the prior year receipts be claimed first in the ensuing year; then, if there is still an excess over the maximum, the new donations can be carried forward to the following year. If the donation is not claimed by the end of next year it becomes over-age and is not deductible at all.

PLEDGE DEAL

Most charitable organizations would be very pleased to set up a pledge arrangement with a taxpayer so that a large lump sum donation can be paid over a period of several years and, thus, make it all allowable.

Registered retirement savings plan contributions are allowable as a deduction provided that they are paid in the taxation year or within 60 days after the end of the year, If a taxpayer wants to ensure that he does contribute the maximum allowable of 20 per cent of his income he should make the larger portion of the payment during the months of January and February for the preceding year.

Then, if the amount exceeds 20 per cent of his income for that prior year the excess can count as a deduction for the year it is made. Whereas, if the contribution is made in any other month and it proves to be more than 20 per cent of the income of that year the excess is not allowable as a deduction in any year.

People who own revenue real estate should be cautious of selling their property late in the year if they intend to re-invest in similar property. A disposal of a depreciable building often gives rise to recapture depreciation.

If the taxpayer buys another rental property of the same class before the end of the taxation year the recapture of depreciation is applied to reduce the depreciation allowable on the new property in the future years.

However, if the end of the year occurs between the dates of disposal and re-investment the recaptured depreciation becomes income of the year of the sale and is subject to income tax in full. There is a provision for averaging the recapture income but this is a method of arriving at the tax rate; the whole tax is all payable at once.

INTEREST ALLOWED

Interest expense is an allowable deduction if the funds borrowed are used for the purpose of producing income, but not if the funds are used for any other purpose such as to buy a house or to pay for a vacation. It may occur that a taxpayer could better arrnage his affairs so that he uses his own money for his non-investment use and all his borrowings are applied to earn income.

This is particularly important for the ordinary individual who sells the house he lives in and buys another one. If he carries part of the sale price as a loan under an agreement for sale then the interest he earns is taxable income but the interest he pays out on a mortgage on his new house is not an allowable expense. It would normally be better to sell the agreement and apply the extra cash to reduce the mortgage on the new house.

Investors in bonds should consider the net yield after tax and after inflation. A bond, or bank account, or any other investment at 6 per cent a year may produce a net loss for a person whose top tax rate is 30 per cent.

For example:

Gross interest income on $1,000	$60.00
Tax at 30 per cent	18.00
Net income after tax	42.00
Erosion by inflation at 4.25 per cent on $1,000	42.50
Net yield is a loss	$ .50

Investments in other things may also be subject to tax and inflation.

The 20 per cent dividend tax credit is a great help if the investment is in shares of Canadian corporations, and inflation normally works in favor of the investor in any form other than in lending money.

There are many other tax-saving ideas which are available for ordinary taxpayers and it is usually well worthwhile for everybody to consider the taxation effect of every major expenditure they make.

SIGN FIRM RE-SIGNING

A Victoria outdoor sign company recently organized is planning a $55,000 expansion and relocation this summer.

Manager Bert Orr, of Knight Signs Ltd., 478 Cecilia, said the company will move in June to 485 Garbally Road where there will be more production area.

Last week the company began a program of replacing all B.C. service station identification with new Gulf Canada insignia for the 115 stations on Vancouver Island.

Falconbridge To Process Low Grade Ore

TORONTO (CP) — Marsh A. Cooper, president of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., said Wednesday his company will try to refine in Canada any new nickel supplies it mines.

He was commenting to reporters on the new amendments to the Ontario Mining Act. The amendments would make processing in Canada mandatory, by next Jan. 1, of all ore mined in Ontario.

Falconbridge, which produces about 10 per cent of the free world's nickel, ships semi-processed nickel-copper ore from its Sudbury mines to Norway for processing.

Mr. Cooper, speaking after the company's annual meeting, said Falconbridge has a pilot plant operating in Norway. If its operations prove feasible for Canada, a full-scale processing plant could be built at Sudbury within three years.

He would not estimate its cost, but company officials said $50,000,000 would be a likely minimum.

"But refining has changed," Mr. Cooper told the meeting. "Plants today are highly automated, and need few workers. A new 40,000,000-pound plant might only employ about 100 people."

One aim of the Ontario amendments is to provide jobs in Canada.

In reply to a question from the floor, Mr. Cooper said his company made a submission to the Ontario government everal weeks ago on the new amendments and it would be "imprudent to comment" on their possible effect on Falconbridge.

CITES LOW-GRADE ORE

Mr. Cooper said, however, that growing demand for ferro-nickel by steel companies has led Falconbridge and other companies to pay increasing attention to the mining of laterite, or low-grade ore, which does not need major refining.

Gibson will replace John Tibbits who recently was appointed manager of the chamber's organization services department in Montreal.

Swiss Discount

Swiss commercial banks have raised their private discount rate to 4 per cent from 3¾ per cent set in October, 1967, the Swiss Bankers' Association reports.

Investors-G-W

First reading was given in the Manitoba legislature Monday to a bill which would enable the Investors Group to issue preferred shares for capital to buy a majority interest in Great-West Life Assurance Co.

The Investors Group offer expires April 17.

The group, a major mutual fund industry in Canada, has offered $70 million for 307,000 Great-West shares at $140 a share. Investors already has purchased 194,000 shares of Great-West and the new purchase would give it a majority of the one million outstanding shares.

'I Am James Bond,' He Insists

By GRANVILLE WATTS

LONDON (AP) — Actor James Bond, sipped vodka and said: "I appear with 14 girls in this picture—not a bad average."

Australian-born Lazenby, 29, was taking time off between scenes of the new Bond film, On Her Majesty's Secret Service, being made at Pinewood Studios near London.

For an untried actor with an $8,400,000 film on his shoulders, Lazenby is supremely relaxed.

"I have made a happy discovery! I am James Bond," he said in an interview.

"Well, let's say our personalities are similar," he added.

"I don't feel I'm really acting. I take chances as they come and, like Bond, I've got an eye for the chicks."

Producers Harry Saltzman and Albert R. Broccoli, the makers of five other Bond films, surprised the film world by picking the unknown Lazenby for the plum part given up by Sean Connery.

Scots-born Connery was signed originally to a contract calling for six Bond movies. But because he tired of playing 007, Broccoli and Saltzman agreed to release him after five.

"What started as a pleasant part became a Frankenstein's monster," Connery said of the Bond role.

DR. NO WAS FIRST

Connery, 38, was three years older than Lazenby when he made the first Bond film, Dr. No, in 1962. He wore a hair piece in the later Bond movies. Lazenby has a thick crop of well-brushed brown hair.

Physically Lazenby is slimmer and less rugged than Connery, but is possibly more athletic in the part. He doesn't use stunt men doubles as Connery often did in the later Bonds.

Four hundred actors and male models were considered for the role. Among them was Lazenby, whose previous claim to fame was limited to his appearance in an advertisement for chocolate in a British television commercial.

Lazenby, whose father works as a grocer in Australia, was educated at the local high school in Goulburn, near Sydney, and began work as an apprentice motor mechanic.

He soon switched to car salesman and then sailed for Britain in 1964 with a one-way tourist ticket and one spare suit.

He soon was working as a car salesman in London's affluent Park Lane. A freelance photographer spotted him and persuaded him to try modelling. Within a year he was one of the best-paid male models in Europe.

"Playing Bond is like having one's childhood dreams come true," said the six-foot-two Lazenby, a bachelor. "You know, all that shooting and stuff. I enjoy it."

Media-Owned Cablevision Discouraged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The justice department has urged the Federal Communications Commission to bar television stations and newspapers from owning a cable television system in their local areas.

The department also urged the commission to let the community antenna systems originate their own programs and sell advertising time in direct competition with conventional television stations.

The FCC disclosed the justice department's comments Wednesday. They were submitted in connection with the commission's inquiry into policy making in the fledgling field of community antenna television.

The FCC is considering regulations which would define the role of CATV in relations to the existing broadcast industry.

The justice department said CATV "can provide significant competition to existing local mass media, particularly if it is permitted to engage in program origination and accept advertising—two developments we believe would be in the public interest."

1,000 Men Remain Out

NANAIMO — (CP) — Members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada union voted Wednesday night to stay off the job at MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac division until their grievances are settled.

Earlier in the day, the company won an injunction restraining 35 electrical workers from picketing the mill after a dispute over the electricians' demands for jurisdiction over new safety equipment.

Stan Shewaga, president of the paper workers' local, said the 1,000 men voted not to return to work until grievances involving seniority, overtime and employment of outside contractors are settled.

4-Year-Old Creek Victim

KELSEY BAY — Timothy Francis Cooke the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooke, was drowned Wednesday morning in a creek outside his parents' Kelsey Bay home.

The boy was found at 11:45 a.m. by his cousin, 12-year-old Michael Quinn of Victoria.

An RCMP constable said that the boys had been playing together and parted. The body was found shortly after.

WOMAN HELD 2 HOURS

TORONTO (CP) — Terri Thompson, a 31-year-old CBC producer, spent two hours in jail Wednesday after police arrested her for failing to pay parking tickets totalling $223.50.

Miss Thompson said it was a "dehumanizing" experience. She said she was stripped naked and searched at the Don jail.

Two policemen came to her home at 7:30 a.m. and asked her to "either pay $223.50 in parking fines or we will have to take you to jail," Miss Thompson said in an interview.

"I asked if they could wait until the banks opened but they told me they had to have the money or a certified cheque right away. Of course I had neither, so they took me to jail."

Her lawyer arrived at Don jail with a certified cheque for $223.50, but was told the cheque was for too much and could not be accepted, she said.

The amount had been reduced, Miss Thompson said, because she had already spent part of a day in jail.

Public Opinion 'Ready' For Obscenities on TV

LONDON (CP) — Milton Shulman, Canadian-born television and drama critic of The Evening Standard, says the reaction here to Warrendale, the controversial Canadian film about mentally-retarded children, has shown public opinion to be "decades ahead" of timid TV executives.

Shulman notes in his weekly TV column that the CBC, which commissioned Warrendale three years ago, put it under wraps because of the obscenities uttered by one child undergoing treatment. The BBC refused to show it on the grounds it was "too harrowing."

But on its recent showing here by the commercial Harlech TV Network, not one complaint about the obscenities was received.

"As the demonstration of how much more liberal and tolerant the average viewer is about four-letter words ... the experience of Warrendale is most enlightening," writes Shulman, a native of Toronto.

Shulman, conceding that at times Warrendale's "raw realism" was almost unbearable to watch, says that no matter whether one approves of the form of treatment used at the institution or not, the film is 'an experience that any mature person should be entitled to share if he so wishes."

Lottery, Fatter Pay Cheques May See End to U.S. Draft System

By BOB HORTON
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After years of fretting and dickering over the military draft, the United States finally may be ready to work major changes in the way it raises and maintains armed forces.

For a change it looks as if the executive branch of government and Congress might reach terms for a basic revamping of the increasingly unpopular Selective Service system.

Beyond Vietnam lies the possibility, however slim, that the U.S. could for all practical purposes abandon the draft as the primary means of getting men into military uniform.

Ironing out inequities in the existing draft setup while working toward creation of an all-volunteer force has been made a major goal of the Nixon administration.

Use of a lottery, fatter pay cheques for military men, intensified recruiting on college campuses where there now is a great deal of hostility to the Vietnam war—all may figure in the Nixon program.

President Nixon has chosen two fronts on which to launch his effort.

CONGRESS DUBIOUS

The Pentagon, headquarters for 3,500,000 men and women now in uniform, has been told to proceed at full speed on a "Project Volunteer" which has the double aim of curing short-term ills of the draft and laying out a program for manning future ramparts with volunteers.

The president also plans to establish a commission on the all-volunteer force to make recommendations which will be melded with the Pentagon's into a working plan.

Congress generally has been dubious about whether an all-volunteer force is even feasible, and if it is, how effectively it could be run in peacetime.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), for one, claims an all-volunteer force would soon become "an all-black army fighting white middle-class wars."

The Pentagon denies it, saying the theoretical maximum of Negroes in such a force would be 25 per cent if every qualified Negro signed up.

PRECEDENT EXISTS

A volunteer army wouldn't be a new thing in the history of the United States. For instance, there was no draft between the two world wars but the quality of the small, standing volunteer force then —in the 100,000 range — was admittedly poor.

Low pay and a lack of incentive in a peacetime situation no doubt contributed to this. The draft as known today began in 1940 when the total U.S. force was 458,000 men, or about one-eighth of what it is now.

It was dropped in 1947 and 1948, but a new draft law was put into effect in November, 1948.

President Harry Truman tried to get along without the draft in two brief periods in 1949 and 1950 but couldn't sustain the needed force level on a volunteer basis.

Most lawmakers agree the Selective Service system needs sharp modification. Many of the country's young men, watching the draft's hit-and-miss performance in the Vietnam war, have turned against the entire system.

LOTTERY POSSIBLE

At present, all young men aged 19 to 26 are eligible for the draft but many college students and others receive deferments. The trend in the last few years has been towards fewer numbers of college students being drafted because they are able to "pyramid" one deferment after another until age 26, when they are relatively safe from induction.

Congress in 1967 rejected a proposal for a lottery system to choose among the growing numbers of equally qualified young men available for military duty, but the new administration appears ready to recommend it again.

The Pentagon proposes to move on several fronts to encourage volunteer enlistments: Military pay will be improved, better military housing will be provided, fringe benefits such as government-paid education after service will be broadened, and the whole idea of service in the armed forces will be polished up.

A recruit entering the army now draws about $110 a month. If he were on a five-day, 40-hour week, which, of course he isn't, that figures to less than $1 an hour. The federal wage minimum for civilian laborers is $1.25.

That's the kind of brilliant high fidelity you get from The Ridgewood—our 3-band AM/FM/MULTIPLEX (FM stereo) radio. And to make the most of it, we give you two full-range 6½" speakers in separate walnut cabinets. What else great about this complete modular stereo system? Try 34 solid state devices, AFC on FM to prevent station drifting, an exclusive lighted stereo eye system that pin-points stations with uncanny accuracy, and a special FM selector that has delusions of grandeur—it only tunes FM stations broadcasting in stereo. Add the fact that you can plug in a perfectly matched record changer (Model RD 7673C) and 8-track stereo tape deck (Model RS 800AS) at any time, and it's easy to see why catching the component bug from Panasonic is reaching epidemic proportions.
But then, what do you expect from a company that designs, engineers and manufactures all its own components? Just the best. And best is what you get. Even in our more compact hi-fi radios. Like The Harrison—our exciting new concept for an AM/FM table radio with twin speakers and a hand-rubbed Walnut cabinet. And The Astrosound—our new look-of-tomorrow AM/FM radio with digital clock, sleep switch, music or buzzer alarm, built-in AM/FM antennas and illuminated slide rule tuning.
But rather than us tell you how we play things your way, just do a little eavesdropping at your Panasonic dealer's showroom. You'll like what you hear!

WOMAN IN DOG HOUSE FOR POSSESSING DRUG

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Seattle woman, Dorothy Ann Martin, was found guilty of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking Wednesday after police invaded the privacy of a dog house.

The woman was remanded until April 23, for a sentence after court was told that city police and RCMP raided a Bidwell Street dwelling last May 27, searched the premises then went outside and searched a dog house in the yard.

Witnesses said Mrs. Martin, who was one of thirty persons present in the dwelling, had $4,562 in her underclothing and that a police search outside produced a total of eight kilos of green, plant-like material.

One kilo was said to be found in a car which the woman said she had driven from Seattle—and the balance was discovered in the dog house.

Great Pretender Given Prison Role

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Impersonator Ronald Ivan Macdonald, who kept a suitcase of newspaper clippings comparing him with Great Impostor Ferdinand Demara, is going to get medical help in combatting his ability to pretend.

But the help will be in prison. Macdonald was sentenced Wednesday to two years in Kingston penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to causing persons to act on a forged document.

Macdonald was arrested Dec. 11 after working for more than two months with the London Adult Education Centre as a $10,500-a-year job counsellor.

Judge D. B. Menzies noted that Kingston has a psychiatrist and said he will recommend that the doctor "observe and treat you as he sees fit."

The court was told of Macdonald's previous convictions:

—At Port Arthur, Ont., in 1966, where he had posed as a psychology professor at Lakehead University for three years and where he also held a seat as a school trustee.

—At Kimberley, B.C., in 1967, where he was convicted of using forged documents to get a psychologist's job after claiming he held a master's degree in psychiatry.

London psychiatrist Dr. Bernard Pivnick testified Macdonald also held down teaching positions at McGill University, Montreal, Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, N.S., prior to going to The Lakehead.

TELLS OF CLIPPINGS

Crown Attorney M. E. Martin told of the clippings, some in triplicate, of Demara, who at various times in the 1950s masqueraded as a Royal Canadian Navy doctor, a deputy prison warden, a Trappist monk, a college professor and a deputy sheriff.

Demara's impersonations were chronicled in a book and movie, both entitled The Great Impostor.

Dr. Pivnick said that to Macdonald the clippings "are like testimonials—that's why some are in triplicate."

He also said that letters received from people at the various institutions where Macdonald worked "were all surprisingly favorable." He said he didn't find anyone who was unhappy with the quality of the work done by Macdonald.

His diagnosis was that Macdonald was "involved in a form of behavior which is in some ways and certain areas against accepted behavior of the community at large."

This kind of illness "is a repetitive thing" and he recommended long-term psychotherapy coupled with supervision in certain areas.

The court was told earlier that Macdonald presented documents stating he held academic degrees from Detroit's Wayne State University when he applied for the London position.

HELD NO DEGREES

Mr. Martin, who said Macdonald held no degrees, produced equipment he said was used to forge the seal of Wayne State on documents. He said the stamp was found in a search of Macdonald's quarters following his arrest. A separate charge of fraud was withdrawn Tuesday.

Wayne State came into Macdonald's life earlier in his career. He told an interviewer at Port Arthur in 1966 that he was expelled from the Detroit university for a student prank and other universities refused to let him attend when they saw "expelled" on his credentials.

versity said his first act as an impostor at McGill in 1960 was unbelievably easy. He used the name Everett Marshall.

"I didn't produce any documents or anything. I wrote a letter saying I was interested in going there. The reply was indifferent. But I won the job over 17 or 18 other psychiatry lecturers. . . . I had some of the best psychiatrists working with me. I had excellent instruction under their supervision."

After two years, Macdonald said, he felt it natural that somebody would recognize him and he resigned.

Next he posed as William Anderson at St. Francis Xavier.

"They recalled me there as a 'down-to-earth' psychologist," Macdonald said.

At Port Arthur, where Macdonald got a day in jail and a fine of $500, he pleaded guilty to impersonating Dr. D. R. MacDonald, a professor at the University of Missouri.

Free-Wheeling Days End For French Motorists

By DONALD H. LOUCHHEIM

PARIS (WP) — In the past few months, Frenchmen, who traditionally view any kind of change with suspicion, have been bombarded with a series of sweeping, revolutionary reforms.

The venerable, archaic university system is being overhauled. A long-awaited new tax structure has been unveiled. The senate is due to be remodeled. And on April 27, Frenchmen will vote on an unprecedented plan for administrative decentralization, the first maior break with the pattern of French rule consecrated by Napoleon.

Yet none of these important government initiatives has stirred as much controversy or emotion here as a new administrative decree that was put into effect recently.

In its wake, fears have been expressed about the future of France's automotive industry. There have been warnings that commerce, transportation and already choking urban centres will be subjected to new forms of strangulation.

But above all, there has been a widespread feeling that what the Frenchman treasures most—his individualism—is being whittled away and that a new yoke of uniformity is being brutally and unjustifiably imposed.

The cause of all this criticism is nothing less than a government decision to impose a maximum speed limit on a few selected highways. This revolutionary ruling is unprecedented in France, where motorists have always enjoyed the privilege of uninhibited travel on the open road and have been able to chalk up an impressive highway death rate that is the equivalent of twice that of the U.S.

Although the new government program is revolutionary, it is hardly sweeping. Only portions of five roads, totaling about 1,000 miles of highway, are affected. On these mostly two-lane thoroughfares, where by American standards the maximum limit would be 45 miles an hour, a 60-m.p.h. limit has been decreed. Motorists will still however, be allowed to accelerate to 75-m.p.h. for passing purposes.

The limit does not apply to auto routes or limited access highways, where Frenchmen who can only cruise at 90 m.p.h. in their Peugeots will still be buffeted by Citroens and Mercedes that whip by at speeds that are barely subsonic.

Road Death Rate Twice That Of U.S. Highways

Until the government decreed the new, carefully limited speed limit, the only rule of the road in non-urban areas was survival of the fittest. The ultimate testimonial to the bravery and tenacity of the French motorist was the number of head-on collisions that occurred each weekend on three-lane highways. The new speed limit, of course, will not prevent the continuation of such jousting by the stouthearted. But the very suggestion that "speed kills" has triggered an outpouring of protest from motorists and automobile clubs.

As a public service, one of France's major morning newspaper published a long article, accompanied by detailed maps, under the headline "five ways to avoid the roads with speed limits."

It showed alternative routes running parallel to those posted by the government which would enable motorists, by going a mile or two out of their way, to cover the same ground at unlimited speed.

This advice seems to have been followed. Police reported after the first weekend of the new speed limits that many motorists traveling from the Belgian border to Paris detoured to Route N2 to avoid the 60-mile stretch of Route A1 that had been posted.

Newsmen who toured the posted routes found gas station attendants complaining that their sales had dropped dramatically, presumably because of diversions to alternate roads.

The arguments against the speed limit have ranged from philosophical ones (imposing uniformity) to practical ones (speed limits will create traffic jams) to economic ones (French engine manufacturers will have to redesign motors, etc.).

This last argument was brought into play by many of the motorists stopped during the first day of the new controls. The complaint, as reported by police: The only way to avoid straining the engine in third gear was to shift into fourth and go above 60 m.p.h.

For the initial "break-in" period of the speed limit French police have been instructed to do nothing but warn offenders. But a complex network of radar stations, observation posts and hiding places for patrol cars is being established for the day when tickets can be written and fines can be levied.

Despite the protests, the government, which has refused to back down on any of its other reforms, seems unlikely to bend on this one. And French motorists already appear to be shifting their focus to what is shaping up as their next major battle—the fight against the parking meter.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1969 —PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

Among Victoria's mail-box watchers is a friendly, grey-thatched motion-picture projectionist by the name of Bert Abbott. Each morning for weeks, he has hoped to find a letter from the Passport Office in the little metal bin on his front porch wall.

But that letter hasn't turned up, and with a trip to Europe and about $600 at stake, Bert is feeling the strain.

Before I tell you his story, here's a warning that this English-born Canadian of 50 years residence bids me pass on to all who may be planning trips abroad.

"Don't delay in applying for your passport. What used to take only a week or two now seems to require months."

Footsteps sounded on the pavement. They passed on along Hampshire Road, and Bert completed his message. "What seems like too soon may not be soon enough."

★

The Abbotts began their own planning last fall. Bert would add a month of leave to his holidays this year, and they'd visit the British Isles and the Continent. They hope to leave in May.

Aware that External Affairs has tightened up on regulations governing Canadian passports since Martin Luther King's American slayer used one of these precious tokens to ease his escape, they started operations in February.

The first step was to make application for proof of Canadian Citizenship, a matter which had given Bert no trouble in the past. (His wife, Canadian-born, does not figure in this account.)

At Victoria Courthouse, he produced the appropriate documents, among them some that showed he had left London for Canada as a child. He topped these off with an affadavit.

What he expected to receive from External Affairs was a plastic-enclosed card affirming his Canadian identity and clearing the way for his passport application.

What he got, after a weary wait, was a letter asking him to forward his birth certificate.

Since he had met all with requirements set forth on the government form, this request puzzled him. But he complied, and resigned himself to another wait.

Today, almost two months after he made his application for proof, he's still waiting.

"I've given them more evidence than was asked for," Bert Abbott told me over coffee, "and I understand that they have to be very thorough and careful. But I can't think what's holding things up."

Many another would-be traveller is asking that same question — one that has been sharply echoed by Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson.

And, as Bert points out, the delay could cost them a good deal in money and disappointment.

★

He and his wife are booked on one of the scores of chartered flights that carry British Columbians overseas from Vancouver.

Seat reservations for these must be made months in advance, and be backed by a down payment on the fare.

Full payment is required up to 60 days before take-off.

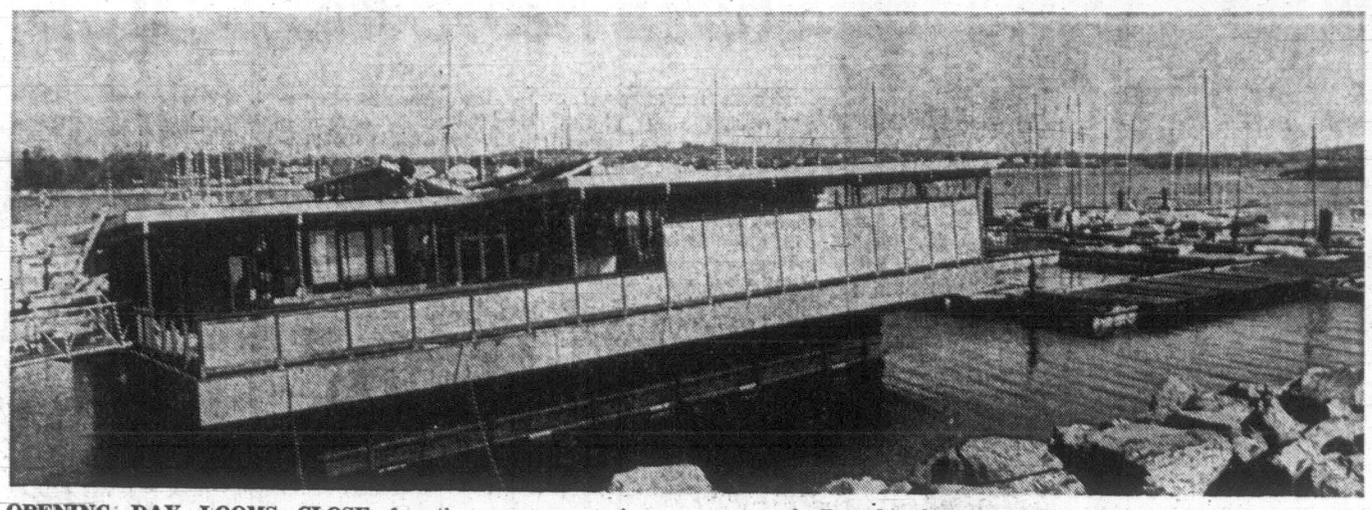
"There's no refund, either," Bert told me. "You can take out insurance, as we did for $6 but that only provides for a partial rebate in case of sickness."

The Abbotts are in excellent health, and they are also patient in spite of a frustrating situation. Still, they feel that prospective travellers should have been warned by External Affairs Minister Michael Sharp regarding the time required for a clearance.

"I can't apply for my passport until that first application is approved," Bert sums up, "and even when it is, I suppose I'm in for another wait."

An outlandish situation, I think you'll agree, and one that badly needs righting!

Bert walked with me to the door. The mailman had come, and gone, but the letter he'd left wasn't the one on which a long-planned trip hangs.



OPENING DAY LOOMS CLOSE for the new seaquarium receiving final touches at the Oak Bay Marina. "Sealand of the Pacific," officials say, is due to open in early May. The unique structure, half as large again as the former one at the marina, will have five separate floating compartments. One of these at the far end, 68 feet wide and 88 feet long, will house a 14-foot, 3,500-pound killer whale which is due to be flown here from Seattle next week. Bound to be a star of the floating attraction, he will be carried aboard a transport plane, and be regularly sluiced down during his trip. Other occupants of the marine complex will include four dolphins, various types of fish, octopuses, sea lions and live sea birds of the area. The latter will be able to be seen from both above and below the waterline. (Times Photo By Bill Halkett)

$5 Million Lost Aid 'Shameful'

Region Taxpayers Hit By Board's Indecision?

By JOHN MIKA

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today said he agrees with Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson that it is shameful Greater Victoria ratepayers may lose $5 million of federal help for sewer projects through default.

But he disagreed with Anderson's suggestion it was the provincial government's fault.

Loffmark said the responsibility lies entirely in the hands of the Greater Victoria regional board which is in charge of the proposed metro sewer project.

Anderson made his comments Wednesday night to a meeting of the Esquimalt Provincial Liberal Association, pointing out that a deadline for federal subsidies on trunk sewers, outfalls and sewage treatment plants runs out March 31 next year.

SPRING DEADLINE

He said the $23 million Greater Victoria sewer project which has been under civic discussion for two years could have qualified for up to $5 million of federal assistance if completed by next spring.

"All this federal money is being held up," said Anderson. "Why aren't we taking advantage of it?"

He said he was "pushing hard" to ensure that the Esquimalt naval base would be connected to the proposed sewer system, if it is built, to cut down pollution of the harbor.

"To delay (the project) is just crazy," he said.

Anderson urged the provincial Liberals to write letters "as individuals" to Loffmark demanding action to start construction of the sewer project.

"It's not to me but to the regional board that they should write," Loffmark said this morning.

"I find it hard to reconcile Mr. Anderson's concern for cleaning up pollution quickly with the statements of his fellow Liberal, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich who wants to dump raw sewage into the waters around Greater Victoria."

Loffmark said his own warning to the regional board that primary treatment plants will be required if there is any extension of the existing sewer system did not constitute an obstacle to obtaining the federal subsidy.

He pointed out the Ottawa assistance was primarily intended to help defray the costs of sewage treatment and prevention of pollution.

"It's up to the board to start the work but if there is anything specific anyone wants me to do to help, I'd like to know what it is because I'm certainly anxious to do my part in combatting the spread of pollution."

Regional Board Tardy, Loffmark Wants Beds

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today said he is "still concerned" with the Greater Victoria regional hospital board's tardiness in deciding how it will distribute the 600 extended-care beds approved by ratepayers last year.

"I expressed concern last month over the time it is taking to allocate these beds and I'm still concerned," said Loffmark in a telephone interview from Vancouver.

"But (Victoria) Mayor Hugh Stephen assures me that they will have plans ready for all 600 beds by the end of April and I am content to wait that much longer."

He was asked for comments on attacks by Stephen and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis against senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread who suggested there has been undue delay in formulating plans to use the $9.3 million voted by ratepayers last fall.

Stephen is current chairman of the regional hospital board and Curtis is past-chairman. Both described Dr. Whitbread's comments as a "deplorable" intrusion into the board's affairs.

Loffmark, who has overall responsibility for co-ordinating the jurisdiction of the province's 25 MHOs, was diplomatic when asked if he thought Dr. Whitbread really had overstepped the bounds of his job in discussing hospital requirement.

GOOD FAITH

"I have the highest regard for Dr. Whitbread and also for Mayor Stephen and I believe they're both expressing their views in good faith," he said.

"To my knowledge, however, the regional hospital board has only allocated 150 (proposed) extended-care beds to Gorge Road Hospital and 25 to Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island and our department has approved.

"They also have indicated recently to us they will allocate a number of beds to the north part of Saanich peninsula but other than that there have not been any plans submitted so far."

Dr. Whitbread touched off the sharp retorts from the two mayors by saying it was "fantastic" that only 150 beds had been firmly allocated a year after the referendum. He said the board should lease or buy existing facilities to meet the critical shortage now.

This brought from Mayor Stephen:

NO UNDERSTANDING

"For him to depart from the context of his particular job and make gratuitous comments of this kind is most unfortunate to say the least.

"As mayor and chairman of the hospital board, I deeply deplore this intrusion which can only be a grave disservice."

Stephen suggested that Whitbread "confine his observations to his immediate area of responsibility."

Dr. Whitbread's "statement is not correct," Curtis said. "I find his comments most improper for a department head, which is really his position in the community.

"He speaks without knowledge of the progress which has been made, and particularly without regard for the significant advances made in recent weeks by Mayor Stephen and directors of the regional board.

EXAGGERATION

"Even the reference that it is one year since the referendum was held is an unacceptable exaggeration. It was held, in fact, last October."

Curtis added that he was becoming increasingly concerned over "Dr. Whitbread's ill-considered comments on regional matters."

Outlining the progress already made in the hospital field Stephen said recommendations for a further 360 extended care beds for the district will be made later this month.

In addition, Stephen said the regional hospital district has recommended 150 beds for Gorge Road, 75 beds at the north end of Saanich Peninsula and 15 at Ganges. The rest will be recommended to the next meeting.

He said 165 beds (150 at Gorge Road and 15 at Ganges) have been approved "and we have in effect made recommendations regarding the 600 beds within a period of just over two months."

The district's advisory committee has also explored the preliminary stages of acute-care beds with a view to a referendum this year.

$3,000 Grant For Artist

Well-known Victoria painter and printmaker Flemming Jorgensen has received a $3,000 grant from the Canada Council. He will use the grant to work full-time for several months in Victoria.

The artist came to Victoria from Denmark 12 years ago. Since that time he has become known for his work in other Canadian provinces, as well as Washington and California, where he has held several exhibitions.

He has had several local exhibitions and has been awarded prizes at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria's annual jury exhibitions and Winnipeg Art Gallery's biennial exhibition.

In 1967 Jorgensen received a small grant from the council to do graphic work while in Denmark.

Trust Manager To Hold Post Premier Hints

Premier Bennett today hinted he does not intend to depose Vancouver accountant A. G. Peter Stanley as the government-appointed manager of Commonwealth Trust Company.

Bennett told reporters he has received a telegram from four Commonwealth Trust shareholders requesting Stanley's removal.

But he pointed out that the request did not come from the company's board of directors nor from last month's special meeting of shareholders to decide whether the company should seek a provincial loan of up to $3 million offered in special legislation.

Asked if he was considering replacing Stanley, Bennett said: "I said in the legislature that there should be a time when the shareholders and the new directors should take control of the company and themselves and get away from the expense of having Mr. Stanley in that office."

EMERGENCY

(The Premier repeatedly told MLAs that Stanely was appointed as an emergency measure when the government found the company was headed for collapse and would not take corrective action ordered by the provincial cabinet. He said the government would step out if the company was reformed with new equity capital and new management.)

The Premier added that only the shareholders and directors can save any company in the final analysis but he would not guess whether the company will be able to raise the minimum $1 million in new stock sales required to qualify it for the government loan.

The premier also said he had tracked down the cause of the rumor that Commonwealth Trust had donated a huge political campaign gift to the Social Credit Party.

He said all trust companies must make a $200,000 deposit with the provincial treasury as part of the requirements in starting business in the province and Commonsealth Trust had done so.

Two Doctors On Traffic Casualty List

A two-car accident at Richardson and St. Charles overnight sent three persons to hospital, two of them doctors.

Dr. Elinor D. Powell, 39, of 657 Moss, suffered chest, back and arm injuries and is in satisfactory condition.

Cherry Fitzgibbon, 46, of Penticton, is also in satisfactory condition with undetermined injuries.

Dr. Roger G. Congdon, 40, of 440 Simcoe was discharged from Royal Jubilee Hospital after treatment for head and knee cuts.

Police said Dr. Congdon was heading south on St. Charles about 11 p.m. when his car was in collision with Dr. Powell's vehicle, westbound on Richardson.

Dr. Powell's car then struck a street sign and a parked car. Damage totalled $1,600.

Mrs. Fitzgibbon was a passenger in Dr. Powell's car.

A woman critically injured in an accident near Qualicum Saturday is now in fairly good condition.

Mrs. June Sekkemo, 1430 Simon, suffered multiple face and body injuries.

Impaired Drivers Avoid Jail When Arm-of-Law Fumbles Case

By DERYK THOMPSON

Carelessness by police or court officials sometimes allows a twice-convicted impaired driver to escape the jail term demanded under the law.

Twice within the last week examples have been evident in Victoria's central magistrate's court.

Section 223 (b) of the Criminal Code says a second offence of impaired driving is punishable by imprisonment for not more than three months and not less than 14 days. A third conviction can bring a jail term of between three months and a year.

However when the driving record of an accused person was read to the court last Wednesday Magistrate William Ostler noted it included three convictions for impaired driving since December 1966, two of them in 1968.

The dispositions on his record showed he was fined $300 on the first, $450 on the second and $250 on the third charge.

Mr. Ostler suggested the only reason the man had not received jail terms was that the presiding magistrate could not have been told of the record.

On Saturday a city man who pleaded guilty to his second charge of impaired driving was given a $400 fine. His first conviction, several years ago, was not brought to the attention of the court.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said afterwards he had not been told of the previous conviction before the proceedings.

"If I had known about it he would have been proceeded against as a second offender like anyone else," he added.

Further questioning of officials revealed that the arresting Oak Bay police officer was late in bringing the circumstances of the case to court and therefore no one was informed.

WARNING

It is customary practice that an accused with one conviction for impaired driving within the previous five years must be "warned" before proceedings can begin. This must be done before he enters a plea.

The "warning" is given privately by the court officer to the accused who is told that having previously been convicted of the same offence he is liable to greater punishment if convicted again.

In Saturday's case the court officer said when this was learned about the accused, it was too late to warn him before the plea was made.

A little known fact is that impaired drivers on their first conviction can be jailed up to three months at the discretion of the magistrate.

They can also receive a fine of $500 in addition to or instead of the jail term.

The usual practice in Victoria is a fine ranging from $300 to $500 depending on the seriousness of the case.

Parachute He Left in War-Torn Italy Takes Ex-Pilot on Sentimental Journey

By PAT DUFOUR

An Oak Bay businessman is going to visit Italy this summer to recover a piece of lost property. And it may take a little doing.

Bill Garrett-Petts, 1832 Carnarvon, will be visiting Florence to try to find the parachute which bore him into the hills around the city where his RAF Beau fighter reconnaissance plane was shot down in the Second World War.

He hasn't been back since the war but is confident that his search will be successful.

It will start at an imposing home in Florence which was commandeered by the German high command at the time he was there.

He hopes to find it inhabited by the previous owners, Dr. and Mrs. Adolph Mischini. He explains why.

●

"I lay in the hill district of Mulcapini, six miles outside Florence, for eight days after I parachuted down.

"My leg was wounded and it was turning to gangrene. On the eighth day I saw a whole tribe of people coming up the hill. I thought they were enemy partisans at first, or Germans. At that time, the Americans were advancing on German-held Florence."

As they came close, the flyer saw that the group included women and children. It was the entire Mischini family, 28 in all, fleeing because of their fear of reprisals after being turned out of their home.

BILL GARRETT-PETTS
... racing the moths

"The doctor spoke English (he'd worked at Guy's Hospital in London) and he was the one who treated me and saved my leg. His wife poured a whole bottle of eau de cologne over it. It was the only antiseptic we had."

●

Garrett-Petts stayed with the family for five days until the Germans were routed from Florence. The family moved back to the city and he went to a casualty clearing centre located outside Pompeii.

When he parted with the Mischinis, the flyer gave them his parachute for safe-keeping, promising to return some day to retrieve it.

That was his last contact with them.

Garrett-Petts finally returned to England, and in 1945 was sent on loan by the RAF to BOAC, to become area manager for Baghdad and Iraq.

His life at the Abbaniyihna station, 60 miles outside Baghdad, was almost as eventful as his days in Italy. Operator of a used book and record exchange in Oak Bay for the past 12 years, Garrett-Petts' adventures in the Middle East rival some of the tales in the books he sells.

They include the night he baby-sat a ransom of diamonds.

"The plane carrying diamonds from Durban to India for the old Aga-Khan's weigh-in was forced down on a lake near us. I was to stand the first two-hour watch.

"I ended up in staying in that plane all night because it was too rough to change watches. All I could think about was what would happen if the plane's moorings gave and she and her cargo drifted 30 miles across to the other side of the lake."

Six weeks later he was to have an even closer experience with the Aga Khan. The 300-pound ruler was returning from his weigh-in when his plane developed engine trouble.

●

He, the Begum (his wife) and the current Aga Khan, Prince Saladin, (then a boy of 11) spent 10 days as the station's guests.

"Every night I'd have to sit on the lawn with the Aga Khan and drink a bottle of port and smoke cigars.

"His wife was a beautiful woman . . . the smell of her perfume permeated the place a month after they left!"

Garrett-Petts also became a close friend of the sheikhs who ruled the area, especially two brothers, Abdul Rezek and Abdul Jahbourb, who had received an annual $10,000 bounty from the British. They had saved the station's personnel from death when they were marched in chains to Baghdad by forces of the pro-German Raschid Ali, cousin of King Feisal, in the early 1940 risings.

●

The two brothers once presented Garrett-Petts' station with a gift of three horses, one of which his staff trained to win the coveted big Gold Cup Race.

In true Arab fashion, the brothers thought twice about their gift. They sent some of their tribesmen to get the horse back. The night raid was fought off by Garrett-Petts' staff.

Abdul Rezek, at least, has not learned the error of his ways. There's now a price on his head for his rebel activities during recent years.

Garrett-Petts will be accompanied on his coming trip by his wife, Margaret, and their two sons, Christopher, 21, and William, 15.

He reports his sons are only "mildly interested" in the retracing of his Italian escape and his wife threatens to make some dresses out of his "lost property."

"That is, if it isn't completely moth-eaten."

Falling Beam Hits Worker, Condition Fair

A 21-year-old man is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital after an industrial accident this morning at the CPR building 468 Bellville Street.

Jack Bradstock, 1312 Blanshard, suffered back injuries when a 12 by 12-inch beam fell on him at about 8 a.m.

He was part of a crew demolishing the structure. He was injured as part of the frame fell.

Hospital officials reported he was under intensive care at press time.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me the name (if any) of the rocky knoll that lies between Beacon Hill and Gonzales Hill, and within the quadrilateral bounded by Fairfield Rd., Memorial Crescent, May and Moss Streets? —N. T. P.

A. Approximately 4.61 acres, between May St. and Masters Rd. were reserved as unimproved parkland in 1959. The official name is Fairfield Hill Park.

Lame-Duck Dogs Given Heave-Ho

By DERYK THOMPSON

The dogs went to the Kiwanis Sportsman Show Wednesday night—and vice versa.

A pack of Labrador retrievers were lined up and a duck was thrown into a large pool.

But when the "fetch it" signal was given, the dogs stayed out—all except a small puppy who may not have known about cold water.

The dogs had to be thrown in by their trainers.

●

The next thrill was Victor, a 600-pound wrestling bear. Almost 1,000 fairgoers saw him defeat six youthful volunteers at the Esquimalt Arena event.

Victor's trainer, Tuffy Truesdale, told the audience he raised the six-foot-five (upright) animal from a cub weighing 4½ pounds, 10 years ago. He said Victor had since wrestled with 35,000 persons.

Lacking any 600-pound opponents, the bear won all its matches Wednesday night. Then it took on Truesdale and the referee, who also lost to him. A muzzle had been placed over his mouth before the entertainment began.

●

Following his work-out Victor was given a bottle of pop as a reward. Perhaps he drank it too fast. He burped.

Truesdale said Victor was near dead when he found him in a cave shortly after his birth, but revived quickly as he carried him home next to his skin.

Also included in the "professional stage show" was an elderly juggler, skilled but monotonous, and a New York couple who amused some of the youngsters with a puppet show and old jikes.

●

The annual Sportsman Show which runs until Saturday features exhibits and displays in the ice arena and curling rink and a small midway in the rear parking lot.

A light drizzle of rain Wednesday night kept the crowds down and seemed to dampen people's enthusiasm.

For the sports-minded there were displays of boats, trailers and motorcycles and action films on skiing, hunting and car racing. However, a blurred movie soundtrack made them difficult to enjoy.

●

Six young YMCA gymnasts performed well on the trampoline, as well as three girls. A golf professional demonstrated his art.

An archery range where spectators could shoot at balloons appeared to be popular.

Naval divers demonstrated equipment and techniques in the pool.

The midway with its gambling booths, food and rides, somehow lacked the usual screaming and fun-filled sounds due possibly to the small crowd.

Separatism Becomes 'An End In Itself'

This is the third in a series of articles in which prominent French-Canadians give their views on the problems facing Quebec today and in the years immediately ahead.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONTREAL (CP) — How did modern separatism grow? First it was a means to an end, then it became an end in itself.

That's the nutshell summary of a prominent French-Canadian who also believes that every Quebecois feels within himself the pull of both separatism and of federalism.

This concept was not challenged, by the way, by a number of anti-separatists in the course of an interview on the general future of Quebec.

One business source recounted an anecdote in connection with the contention of the Province of Quebec Chamber of Commerce that separatism is an economically unfeasible dream.

The business executive addressed a public meeting one night on this theme, stressing the chamber's finding that Quebec's independence from the rest of Canada would result in a drop in living standards. After the meeting, a lawyer emerged from the audience.

"Here I know you're right," the man said, pointing to his head. "But here I'm not so sure," he added, hand on heart.

DREAM NOT PECULIAR

The formula of Rene Levesque and his Parti Quebecois, envisaging a sovereign Quebec within a Canadian economic union, it seen as an attempt to reconcile this old conflict or dualism of the French-Canadian mind and heart. And, of course, nationalist movements in Scotland, Wales and Brittany show the dream of autonomy is not peculiar to French-Canadians.

Quebecois voters tended traditionally to tackle their dilemma by sending an "all-Canada" man to Ottawa and a nationalist, to Quebec City — witness former prime minister Louis St. Laurent and the late premier Maurice Duplesis.

Autonomy was the word used in the days when Mr. Duplessis staged his gladiatorial spectaculars with Ottawa, just as Quebec leaders had done before, though not always in the same way.

"Separatism was a tool in the hands of premiers of Quebec — a very useful tool," said the businessman. "It hung over federal-Quebec quarrels like a sword of Damocles.

"The permier had only to hint that — if the federal negotiators considered his position extreme — they should pause and think about more extreme forces that could be unleashed.

"The fact that there were some separatists was helpful to the premiers. Separatism was a means for arriving at their objectives. But it is a mistake to use the means as an end in itself."

A bigger segment of the Quebec population began to think that the tool was no longer enough in he traumatic changes of the 1960s.

"Mass media," so often blamed or credited in the developments of modern society, helped to bring about a radical change in attitude. Political conflicts between Ottawa and Quebec City were magnified.

'DON'T ACCEPT US'

There was another big factor, the businessman added.

"More and more French-Canadians became aware of conditions which were not normal but in the past had been accepted as normal, such as going into a Montreal department store and not being able to find anyone who spoke French."

This sort of thing led ordinary French-Canadians to think of their English-speaking neighbors this way: "They don't accept us, they don't respect us, even though we are more than 50 per cent of the population in Montreal, 80 per cent in Quebec. Otherwise they would have taken the trouble to learn French."

Language is dynamite because even persons who normally think things out rationally do not do so on this question, said another long time observer on the Quebec scene.

Language discrimination stirs a particular outrage in any citizen, French- or English-speaking, because he feels punished for something that became part of him without a choice, like brown or blue eyes.

The separatist option is not always made on an emotional basis, however. Dr. Marcel Rioux, 50, sociology professor at University of Montreal, recounted his experience:

"I was asked by a Paris editor to write a book about Quebec. I started being mildly autonomist, and I finished maybe strongly independentist.

"I surprised myself. I've been a socialist, more involved in social than nationalist aims. But I found that chapter after chapter built up the evidence for a decisive independence."

MORE POWER NEEDED

What was the single most important factor?

It became a "bare fact" to Dr. Rioux that sociologically speaking French Canada was a nation which required more constitutional and political power to realize collective ideals.

"It seems to me the more you go into Confederation, the more you lose your identity," said Dr. Rioux, referring to French-Canadian minorities outside Quebec.

Certain economists had made it clear that monetary union as Mr. Levesque suggested was impossible.

"There's another thing weird about all this. Levesque assumes that all the rest of Canada can speak as one person. There's no such thing as English Canada — there is Ontario, British Columbia, the Maritimes, the Prairies. How are you going to negotiate the same sort of thing with Ontario and the Maritimes? These areas have different interests," says Charles Perrault, 45, member of a chamber of commerce committee studying separatism and as member of the Economic Council of Canada.

"And why the hell should 15,000,000 Canadians sit down with 5,000,000 Canadians on a one-to-one basis?

But if you don't negotiate on a one-to-one basis you're back to where we are now, practically.

"I'm not saying Levesque's movement hasn't got appeal. I'm saying that in my humble opinion it has no chance of success in the form he presents.

Gideons to Hold Meeting Here

Vancouver Island zone of Gideons International in Canada will hold a rally in Central Baptist Church, Saturday and Sunday.

Cecil R. Roberts, executive secretary in Toronto of Gideons International, will be guest speaker. He is also editor of the Canadian Gideon magazine.

OTTAWA PROBES MINING CLAIMS AT AIRPORT

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner's executive assistant said today the justice department is searching all titles and mining claims in the 3,000 acres chosen by the federal government for its new international airport at Ste. Scholastique, Que.

Richard Hayes said the search is being carried out to determine the validity of land title and mining claims. It is expected to take all summer.

●

"The federal expropriation act would take precedence over any mining claims. The value of the claims would have to be negotiated between mining companies and the department of transport. If they could not agree on the price the matter would have to go to court."

Mr. Turner, on a tour of the north, had no comment.

Acting Quebec Premier Paul Dozois told a news conference in Quebec City Wednesday that 74 claims had been staked in the area during the last few years including 43 claims by the Quebec Mining Explorations Co., wholly owned by the Quebec government.

●

The site chosen by the federal government for the airport encompasses land in the counties of Argenteuil, Deux Montagnes and Terrebonne.

Mr. Dozois said the cabinet passed an order-in-council prohibiting further staking in the region to prevent speculation.

Damage to Okanagan Crops Estimated Up to 50 Per Cent

KELOWNA (CP) — Preliminary estimates of winter damage to Okanagan Valley tree fruits indicates crops may be reduced this year by between 25 and 50 per cent.

And berry growers in the Fraser Valley say they are anticipating a strawberry crop no more than 20 to 25 per cent of normal.

The commercial peach crop in the Okanagan will be poor. Grape crops will be only 25 to 50 per cent of normal and, according to industry experts, there will be very few "if any" apricots.

Southern British Columbia went through its worst winter in years with temperatures in the Okanagan plummeting to 25 and 30 degrees below zero for long stretches in December and January.

Temperatures under 20 below can have serious effects on fruit trees, and many orchards appear to have been severely damaged.

However, there are some bright spots. Apples, cranberries and blueberries should be close to normal. The raspberry crop could be bigger than last year's, which was hard hit by rain.

Packers say there will be adquate supplies of fruit for jams and preserves, but prices will likely be higher because of the need to import raw fruit from other areas.

PACKERS MAY IMPORT

The two major packers in BMC., Nabob and Empress, require about 4,500,000 pounds of strawberries to meet their market commitments and this year will be importing a substantial percentage of their strawberries from Mexico.

Canada Leads the Way in Shaping NATO

By ANTHONY WESTELL

WASHINGTON — On a day early in June, in 1948, two men went anxiously to see Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in his office just behind the Commons chamber, to ask him to approve a decision they thought would change the course of Canadian foreign policy and would be, perhaps, vital to world peace.

Westell

They were External Affairs Minister Louis St. Laurent and Escott Reid, acting chief of the external affairs department in the absence of Lester Pearson.

They wanted the prime minister to agree to send a Canadian observer to the military committee of the new Brussels Treaty powers in London, as the first step in a plan to build a North Atlantic alliance to stem the Soviet tide threatening to engulf Western Europe.

They were anxious because they feared that Prime Minister King—more unpredictable than ever in the last year of his power—would refuse. He disliked military commitments and he had always avoided entanglements with the London government.

Surprise Reply

But if he refused now, there would be little chance of Canada joining a North Atlantic alliance, let alone helping to get the alliance started.

Reid told the story of that fateful meeting with King in an article in the journal of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, in 1967. "We went in together. I could see that Mr. St. Laurent had nerved himself for a battle with King. He said you know Mr. Prime Minister that we have been expecting an invitation from the Brussels Treaty powers to send an observer to the military committee in London.

"We have now received the invitation.

"He paused before going on to marshal the arguments in favor of our accepting the invitation. But he had no opportunity to advance the arguments.

"Mr. King interrupted him 'And about time too. Now as to the visit of the Prince Regent of Belgium . . .' "

So easily was the decision made, culminating a year of quiet diplomacy to test when Pearson, Reid and others were flying their kites to test the idea of a North Atlantic security alliance.

UN Ineffective

The Soviet Union and other Communist powers had shown, by use of the veto in the security council, that the United Nations could not effectively keep world peace. The question was whether drastically to reorganize the UN, perhaps by driving the Communists out, or to create a new regional security pact.

Canada opted for a regional pact, and the far-sighted officials began to promote the idea long before it became government policy.

After Prime Minister King agreed to send an observer to London, St. Laurent moved on to tell the Commons, on June 19, 1948, that the government was engaged in a crusade to initiate a western union of North Atlantic pact.

If the United States would be willing to join Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg in a security pact, he ventured: "We think the people of Canada would wish that we also be associated with it."

There had been private talks between the Western governments behind the scenes, but that was among the first public proposals by a cabinet minister to form a North Atlantic alliance.

It was certainly a key moment in the move of the Western world toward the formation, on April 4, 1949, of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Here, today NATO celebrates its 20th anniversary, with U.S. President Nixon speaking at the spring council meeting of the 15 powers in the alliance.

It is an emotional moment because, as NATO Secretary-General Manlio Brosio put it Wednesday: "The alliance has given us 20 years of peace, security and prosperity in the area guaranteed by it."

If that is a correct assessment, then the Canadian initiative 21 years ago was a master stroke of diplomacy. It not only launched Canada on a new policy of alliance and commitment, but was significant in preserving world order.

Master Stroke Of Diplomacy Helped Launching

This is a widely accepted view, and it helps explain the agonizing over the government's decision, last week, to phase out the commitment of Canadian forces to NATO in Europe.

Romantic Era

Canadians have taken pride in the part this country played in starting the alliance, which marked in some ways our coming of age in the world of diplomacy.

Now 20 years after, we are turning away from that achievement, that romantic era of brave diplomatic deeds.

But, over the 20 years, some myths have grown up, and some questions have arisen about the wisdom of NATO in the first place.

It is a myth, for example, to think that NATO began with the commitment of forces to Europe to forestall an imminent Soviet invasion.

Rather, there was a weakening of confidence and spirit in Western Europe, and the requirement was a mutual security pact mobilizing moral, economic and military resources in a dynamic democratic answer to monolithic communism.

The decision to raise large Canadian defence forces and to station them in Europe was not part of the original 1947-49 plan to form NATO. It was taken in 1950-51 in the light of the Korean war.

Not Withdrawing

By withdrawing forces now, Canada is not withdrawing from NATO. It is returning more or less to the position in 1949 when NATO was launched.

It is a myth also to think that NATO was intended always to be primarily a military alliance. It was supposed to be, equally, a vehicle for political and economic co-operation to strengthen democratic institutions against the attractions of communism.

The military establishments, unfortunately, have always managed to dominate the alliance, despite all efforts to activate the civil sections of the treaty.

Perhaps now things are changing. Secretary-General Brosio recalled Wednesday that President Nixon has envisaged using NATO to further Western co-operation on such problems as pollution and urban congestion. And this spring council is devoted to political consultation rather than to military planning.

Canada of course remains a full political member of NATO, regardless of the decision to withdraw troops.

Was NATO Needed?

There is a serious question, perhaps, as to whether NATO was ever really necessary or desirable. It was a response to a Soviet threat that seemed very real in 1948 and 1949, but which may never have existed.

One of the most respected Western diplomats of our time is George F. Kennan, an expert on Soviet Russia, and the author of many U.S. policies. He was head of the policy planning division of the U.S. state department in 1948-49, when NATO was conceived and created, although he was not directly involved in that decision.

In his memoirs published 18 months ago, Kennan disclosed that he analyzed Soviet moves in Europe at that time not as aggressive but as defensive, and did not warrant strong military reaction by the West, and certainly not a NATO-type alliance.

If he was right the formation of NATO may have precipitated the cold war. If he was right, the Canadian initiative may have locked North America and Europe into a sterile deadlock for 20 years.

But that is history, and what counts now is the next 20 years.

Foreign Aid Stress

Reid, one of the men who went to see Mackenzie King to give the NATO concept a starting push, is now the principal of Glendon College. He looks back 21 years with pride in the NATO accomplishment.

But he looks ahead now to new policies. Canada should remain in NATO, he says, but should withdraw the forces from Europe, the defence budget should be cut in half so that resources may be transferred to foreign aid. That sort of talk is heresy here at NATO's 20th birthday celebrations, when the official line—excluding Canada of course—is about strengthening the military defences against Soviet encroachment.

But, then, NATO itself was a heresy to many people, almost to Mackenzie King, just 21 years ago.

Times change and policies should also.

FORGED CHEQUES

Using blank forms stolen from Alcan's Kitimat works, forgers have cashed 31 cheques totalling over $6,000. The cheques were all cashed in Prince Rupert, Terrace and Smithers during the last few days of March.

Banks and businessmen throughout northern B.C. are being alerted to watch carefully all cheques bearing the Alcan symbol before cashing them.

R.C.M.P. officers are investigating.

Identifying marks on the 31 forgeries located are:

1. All were drawn on the Royal Bank of Canada, Kitimat, B.C. (printed on the face of the cheque).
2. All are dated March 26, 1969.
3. All are made payable to S. G. Stroud—employee number 6-67387.
4. All cheques recovered to date are in the amounts of $283.36 or $132.97.
5. The serial numbers of all the 31 forgeries are between 84001 and 88000.

Before the Magistrate

Guy Stewart Irvine, 26, bought some clothing at a Victoria department store.

He gave the store two cheques for a total of $111, drawn on a Kamloops bank.

But the bank is a new branch and it doesn't open for business until next week.

Irvine, who got out of jail March 15 for writing bad cheques, was sent back Wednesday for another nine months.

"It didn't take you long to get back to your old habits," said Magistrate William Ostler.

A man who was unlawfully at large from Wilkinson Road jail eight days before he was due to be released was sentenced to six months.

David J. King, of Burnaby, had been serving a two year term for false pretenses.

Court was told he was put on the day parole program March 14 and worked in Oak Bay as a landscape gardener. He telephoned the employer early April 2, said he was sick and took a bus to Vancouver.

When he returned he told prison officials he had serious personal problems. He told the magistrate he had been separated from his wife for five years.

Magistrate Ostler said the day parole program was very enlightened and when persons violate it, it was a backward step to the whole program.

"I feel very sorry for you," he said. "It's a tragedy you couldn't wait eight days."

David Petrie, 20, of 431 Hillside was sentenced to four to 12 months in the Young Offenders Unit for possession of stolen property. He pleaded guilty Tuesday.

Magistrate Ostler said it was a pity the youth didn't appreciate the probation he was given last year following a conviction for theft.

Tuesday court was told Petrie had two stolen tires and wheels on his car when stopped by police Friday.

Donn G. C. Paterson, 24, of 845 Princess, was convicted of robbery and remanded to April 18 for sentence.

He earlier pleaded not guilty to robbing a service station attendant of $46 with threats of violence March 5.

Wednesday he took the stand and admitted taking the money but said he had been in the station drinking with the attendant and was "joking around."

He testified he had been drinking heavily all night and said he couldn't explain why he took the money.

In his judgment Magistrate Ostler said the story of the accused was bizarre and almost incredible and considering all the circumstances could not reasonably be true.

A pre-sentence report is being prepared.

Fined $350 each for impaired driving were: Virgil Vanblarcom, 317 Simcoe. Herman Speidel, 1661 Burton, and Thomas Walton, 1751 Cedar Hill.

Orville J. Breithreutz, CFB Esquimalt, was fined $150 for driving while his licence was suspended.

B.C. Tot Drowns

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP)—Daniel James McClure, three, of North Vancouver, was drowned in the Saugeen River at Chesley, 20 miles south of here, Wednesday. The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. McClure, was found in the river by his father.

Soviet Fleet Grows

MOSCOW (Reuters)—The Soviet merchant fleet is expected to grow by more than 50 per cent during the next six years and reach a total of 17,000,000 to 18,000,000 tons by 1975, says Merchant Marine Minister Viktor Bakayev.

CABINET OKAYS EXPORT OF NON-EXPORT LOGS

The provincial cabinet Wednesday approved a timber company's request to export 4,260 sawlogs which had been cut from non-exportable crown lands.

During the last session, Forests Minister Ray Williston assured an International Woodworkers of America delegation that log exports within the province's control would be held down.

The IWA objected to the exports in view of industry indications that sawmills might have to shut down for a period because of the shortage of log supplies for processing.

Wednesday's cabinet order gave Cattermole Timber Ltd., of Vancouver, authority to export 455,730 board feet of spruce, lodgepole pine and balsam "cut from non-exportable lands" owned by B.C.

The order stipulated that in addition to normal stumpage charges, the company would have to pay a $1.50-per-1,000 board feet timber tax. The extra payment involves $683.

Uvic Adopts 'Safeguard' Against Mainland Invasion

The University of Victoria senate Wednesday adopted a "safeguard" designed to prevent an unexpected influx of first-year students from Greater Vancouver during the 1969-70 session.

They may require a 60 per cent average on entrance exams.

RULES HELD

However, the restriction will come into effect only if the University of B.C. raises its first-year entrance requirement for grade 12 students from 60 to 65 per cent.

UBC had announced it will accept grade 12 students with a 60-65 per cent average next year only if it has the physical, financial and educational resources to accommodate them.

The Uvic restriction would come in the form of an announcement that students with an average of less than 60 per cent from school districts 39, 44, 45 and 48 who apply for first year here may be denied admission next year.

Uvic's entrance requirement is currently 50 per cent.

The announcement was recommended by the senate committee on entrance requirements, chaired by Dr. T. Rennie Warburton, assistant professor of sociology.

The committee's statistics indicated that of the five B.C. regions represented by Uvic's student population, region C, Greater Vancouver, is numerically the smallest.

TWO COLLEGES

Forty-four Greater Vancouver students attended Uvic in 1968. Dr. Warburton pointed out the school districts affected all live in the vicinity of two regional colleges, Vancouver City College and Capilano.

If implemented, the restriction on enrolment will only apply during the 1969-70 session.

MAZDA 1200 Get one. They're going fast!

This is the Mazda 1200.

It has front disc brakes, adjustable headrests, a full complement of the latest safety devices and a custom-tailored interior with reclining seats. Features you don't expect to find for $1898. We think it's prettier than the other cars in its class, too. Sleeker. Less angular.

But what really sets the Mazda 1200 apart from the rest of the herd is performance. Light weight, 73 horsepower and a fast action four speed gearbox that take it far in front of the competition. All this performance comes in your choice of two packages: the Sedan shown above, or the Sports Coupe, at left. The Sedan is for those who like their power in a sedate package. The Coupe is for those who think a car should look as fast as it goes. Whichever you choose, you'll have to hurry. They're going fast.

Lou Checks Twins

By The Associated Press

It was a draw for 17 moves until Lou Piniella, the chess enthusiast, checkmated Minnesota Twins.

Piniella, who had four hits in Kansas City's 12-inning opening-game victory over the Twins, managed only one in Wednesday night's 17-inning affair but it gave the expansion Royals a 4-3 victory over the Twins.

It was the rookie outfielder's two-out single in the 17th that chased Jack Hernandez home with the winning run.

Outfielder Steve Whitaker made two errors on the same play in a four-run California rally that helped the Angels to a 7-3 victory over Seattle Pilots.

In other American League action, Chicago White Sox shut out Oakland Athletics 3-0 and Washington Senators dropped New York Yankees 6-4.

TOTES CHESS BOARD

Piniella—who toted his chess board to such diverse locations as Selma, Peninsula, Aberdeen, Baltimore, Elmira, Portland and Cleveland during six minor league seasons—seems to have found a home in Kansas City.

He became an instant favorite with his four-hit debut and Wednesday's winning hit didn't hurt his standing with Kansas City fans.

The Royals had tied the game in the eighth inning on a two-out single by Joe Foy after Rod Carew's daring steal of home had given Minnesota a 3-2 edge in the fifth.

Whitaker was the goat in the Pilots' loss at California.

Seattle was leading 3-1 when Jim Fregosi opened the fifth inning with a single. Jay Johnstone doubled and when Whitaker first bobbled the ball and then threw wild, both runners scored, tying the game.

HELD ON TO LEAD

A walk and three straight singles by Leo Rodriguez, Tom Satriano and Bobby Knoop gave the Angels two more runs and the lead they never surrendered.

Don Mincher homered for the Pilots.

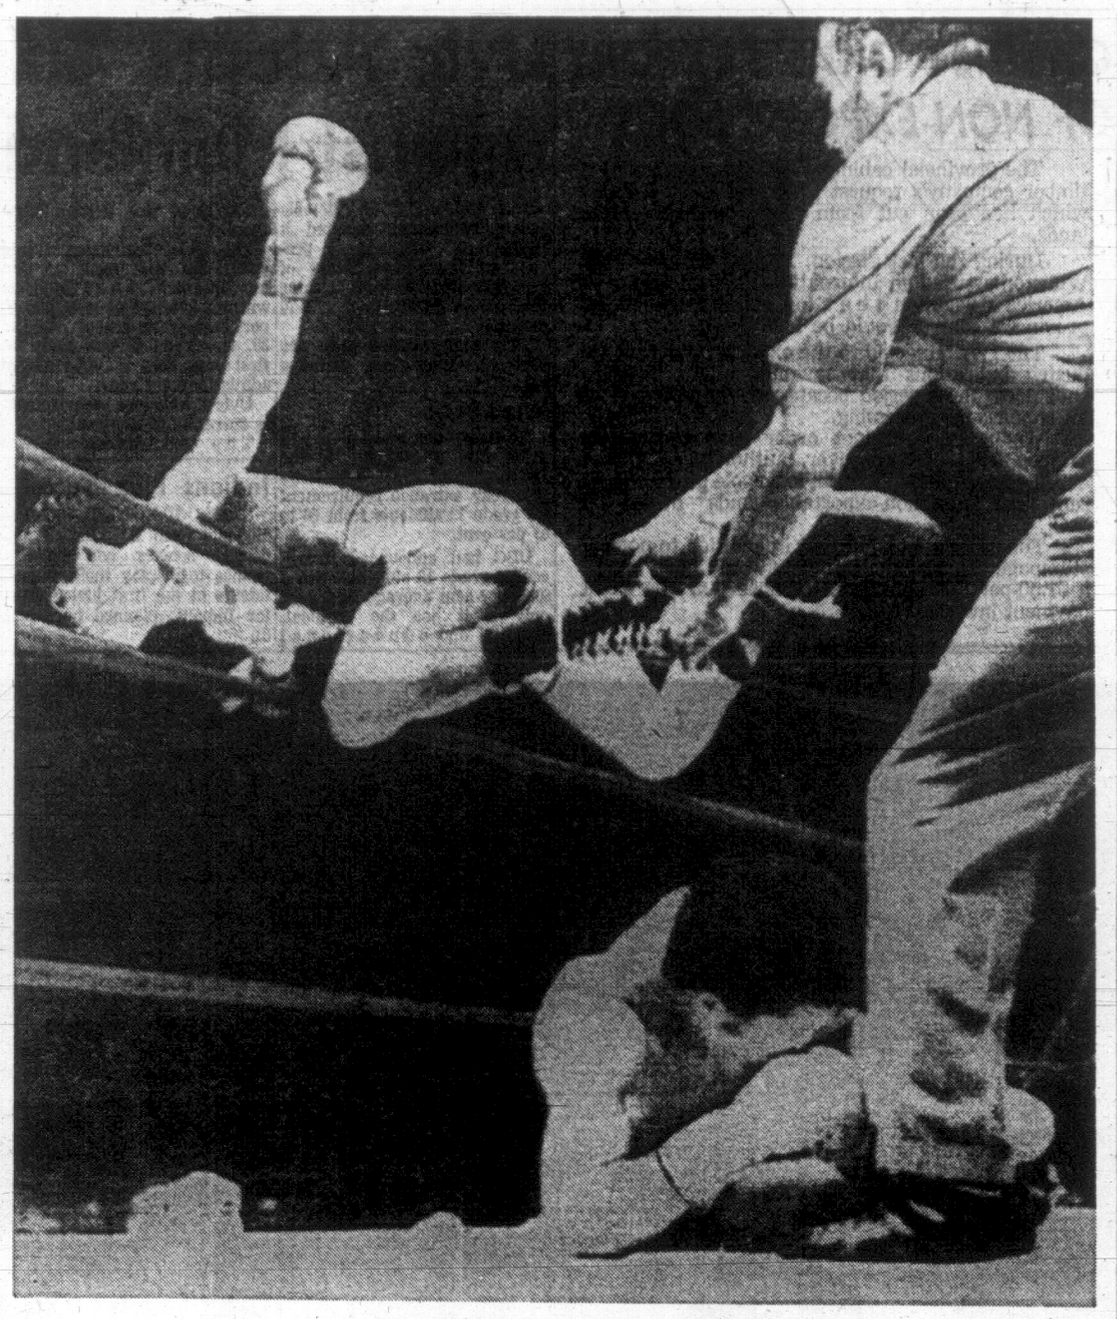
In the National League, San Diego Padres coasted to a 2-0 win over Houston Astros, Atlanta Braves made it three in a row over San Francisco Giants 4-1, Pittsburgh sent defending champion St. Louis Cardinals to their second straight setback 6-1, Cincinnati Reds edged Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 on Bobby Tolan's two-run homer, Billy Williams tied a major league record with four doubles in a nine-inning game as Chicago Cubs walloped Philadelphia Phillies 11-3 and New York Mets drubbed Montreal Expos 9-5.

PAVED WAY

Come-back lefty pitcher Johnny Podres paved the way for Padres, letting only a second-inning single by Curt Blefary and Joe Morgan's bloob single in the third during a seven-inning stint. He also knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly.

The Mets sent Montreal to its first defeat with a four-run first inning and Tug McGraw's strong 6 2-3 innings of relief. Ken Boswell homered for the Mets and Rusty Staub hit one for the Expos.

Milt Pappas retired 14 San Francisco batters in order after allowing a first-inning run, but needed relief help from Ceci Upshaw as the Braves trimmed the Giants and swept their opening three-game series.



FLYING FILIPINO

Helping hand is extended by referee Bill Pacheco to keep airborne boxer Bernabe Fernandez in ring during featherweight bout in Honolulu Wednesday. Flighty Filipino wasn't trying to escape though, but flew over rope as Mexico's Juan Baez slipped to canvas just as Fernandez made wild charge. Fernandez went on to win bout by knocking out Baez in ninth round. (AP Wirephoto)

Sports Demands Add to Pressure

NEW YORK (AP)—Sandy Koufax, forced into retirement after the 1966 season because of an arthritic left arm, said Wednesday that athletes are being subjected to more physical pressures than ever before because "sports are getting more demanding."

Citing his own case, the trouble St. Louis pitcher Bob Gibson has had with his arm and the trouble New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath has had with his knee, Koufax talked about physical demands with regard to pro football generally and pitching specifically.

"You take pro football and you see what I mean," Koufax said. "The defences keep getting better and better so there is more demand for offensive perfection. And your running backs are getting bigger and bigger so that requires more physical response from the defensive men.

"Then look at baseball. The pitchers are dominating the hitters, but because of the home run—everybody tries to put one out on you—the pitchers have to work harder to do it. You go through a whole lineup nowadays and you have to worry about the long ball with every batter.

"Arms weren't made to do what pitchers are asked to do."

Koufax, who now is a broadcaster for NBC Television, also said that the dominance of pitchers had by its very nature called for more perfection from hurlers and therefore ever-increasing physical demands.

"It's a cycle thing," Koufax said, "and the pitcher just has to keep working harder and harder. Most clubs aren't scoring runs now, and that also means the club you're pitching for. So a pitcher has to work hard not to give up runs because he knows he's not going to get runs."

EXPOSURE WASN'T FAIR NEW YORKERS' LAMENT

NEW YORK (CP) — "It Doesn't Seem Fair," the New York Daily News lamented in a front-page headline for a story about Montreal Expos' 11-10 victory over New York Mets in the baseball teams' National League opener here Tuesday.

A three-column picture alongside shows Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau signing autographs for youngsters holding a banner which says: "Go Expos! Valleyfield, Que. est avec vous!"

POLSON, EPSTEIN — B.C.'s BEST

Similarity of Champs

By STEWART LANG

"Oh, yes."

An identical answer rang out from the two top-seeded under-17 players in the B.C. Junior (under-17 and under-15) championships when asked if each planned to continue playing.

Other similarities are also noteworthy between Lyn Polson of Esquimalt and Mike Epstein of Vancouver.

Both reign as current provincial champions of the junior shuttle set, both are top-ranked in the scrambles now being played at the Racquet Club of Victoria, and both received their start in the sport in a similar manner.

Miss Polson began to play about four years ago after being introduced to the mysteries of bird and racquet by the parents of a friend.

This career struck a high note in Vancouver last April when she downed all competitors to capture the B.C. title.

She graduates from Esquimalt High School in June and plans to work while deciding her future.

Miss Polson rated her chances for a repeat win when the finals began this morning as: "Probably pretty good."

Epstein started to play two years ago when a friend persuaded him to enter a tournament — which he won. Prior to this, though, he was active in tennis circles.

In Grade 11 at Lord Byng High in Vancouver, Epstein will "probably go to university" following graduation.

One of his weak points, he conceded, was his lack of power.

Each also proved to have a gift of prophesy.

Asked Thursday who each thought they would face in the singles final, Miss Polson predicted that Vancouver's Sue Kolb would provide her opposition while Epstein maintained that his rival would be the Racquet Club's Peter Vaartnou.

In the semi-finals Thursday night both were proved right.

Vaartnou downed clubmate Dave Howells 15-10, 15-7 while Epstein defeated Roy Colburn of Esquimalt 15-13, 18-13.

Miss Kolb sidelined Kathy Henry 11-1, 11-3 while Miss Polson was grounding Gail Snoden of Vancouver 11-3, 11-2.

Miss Polson also teamed with clubmate Liz Anne Ogden, semi-final winner in singles, doubles and mixed doubles of the under-15 category, to capture a berth in the doubles final.

Epstein made the finals in both the mixed doubles and doubles competitions with clubmate partners Kathy Henry and Charlie Milne.

Semi-final results:

UNDER-15

Girls' singles—Liz Anne Ogden (Esq.) defeated Sue Metcalfe (RC), 11-2, 11-3; Kathy Henry (Van) defeated Diane Marrion (Esq), 11-5, 11-12, 11-8.

Girls' doubles—Miss Ogden and Miss Marrion defeated Lesley Linton and Wanda Hislop (Youbou), 15-9, 15-4; Sue Gower and Miss Metcalfe defeated Susan Larson and Allison Paynter (Kelowna), 8-15, 15-9, 15-9.

Boys' singles—Alan Smith (White Rock) defeated Gerry Mounce (Brent), 15-6, 11-15, 15-10; Bill MacPherson (RC) defeated Erik Vaartnou (RC), 15-7, 15-5.

Boys' doubles — Robert Kennan and Mike Hetherington (Van) defeated Dan Woods and Gerry Mounce (Brent), 15-8, 15-8; MacPherson and Smith defeated Vaartnou and Craig Girrard (Esq), 15-12, 15-8.

Mixed doubles — Glynis Carlson and Smith defeated Miss Marrion and Vaartnou, 15-9, 15-7; Miss Ogden and MacPherson defeated Geraldine Pugh and Dan Woods (Brent), 15-3, 15-6.

UNDER-17

Girls' singles—Lyn Polson (Esq) defeated Gail Snowden (Van), 11-8, 11-2; Sue Kolb (Van) defeated Kathy Henry, 11-1, 11-3.

Girls' doubles—Miss Kolb and Miss Henry defeated Sally Polson (Esq) and Sue Mollliet (RC), 15-7, 15-6; Miss Ogden and Lyn Polson defeated Gail Snowden and Janice Holloway (Van), 18-17, 15-6.

Boys' singles—Peter Vaartnou (RC) defeated Dave Howells (RC), 15-10, 15-7; Mike Epstein (Van) defeated Roy Coburn (Esq), 15-13, 18-13.

Boys' doubles — Alan Hethrington and Rex Moore (Van) defeated Vaartnou and Howells, 15-6, 15-8; Coburn and Dan Lyle (Esq) defeated Epstein and Charlie Milen (Van), 15-9, 15-4.

Mixed doubles — Miss Snowden and Coburn defeated Miss Larson and Alan Burris (Kamloops), 15-4, 15-7; Miss Henry and Epstein defeated Miss Holloway and Milne, 15-8, 15-13.

RETURNING to Sandown Park Friday is Basil Frazier, one of favorite jockeys of Vancouver Island horse racing fans. Frazier spent winter riding at California tracks.

SANDOWN RACING RESUMES FRIDAY

Short sprints were to remain in effect Friday but long romps are a possibility for Saturday as horsemen and officials filled out races for the resumption of racing at Sandown Park.

Friday's eight-race card at the Sidney track is expected to consist entirely of three-and-a-half furlong sprints.

Feature race will be the Century Inn purse.

A B.C. Jockey Club spokesman said six-furlong runs "will probably show" in Saturday's card, which will be highlighted by the Percy Fox Memorial Handicap.

Parade to the post will start at 1:45 each day.

Confident Blues Waiting In Wings

Oakland Leads Western Series After 4-1 Win

(Times News Services)

St. Louis Blues have every reason to be confident about their ability to become the National Hockey League's Western Division representative in the Stanley Cup final.

They won the Western Division championship in a runaway. They knocked off Philadelphia Flyers in four games in the Western Division semi-final for the Stanley Cup. They were the division's representative in the Stanley Cup final last year.

Now they are awaiting the outcome of the series between Los Angeles Kings and Oakland Seals—the latter is leading the series 3-2.

NOT COMPLACENT

And while they are confident, they are not complacent.

"I don't think our club has been lulled into a false sense of self-confidence," coach Scotty Bowman said Wednesday night.

"Sure, I was surprised to knock off Philadelphia in straight games. You're always surprised when you can take two games in the other team's building.

"But we played solid hockey. I used all 11 forwards and they came up with 14 goals in four games."

ALLOW FEW GOALS

Defensively, the Blues were as stingy as they were during the regular 76-game schedule. In four games, they gave up only three goals and veteran Jacques Plante recorded two shutouts to bring his Stanley Cup playoff total to 12.

Plante will start in goal when the series opens, either Saturday or Tuesday, depending on whether the Kings-Seals quarter-final goes the limit.

Glenn Hall, the other half of the Vezina Trophy-winning pair, pulled a hamstring muscle in the first game of the Philadelphia series and only started practising again this week.

Meanwhile, defenceman and assistant-coach Doug Harvey won't be back this season. He suffered head and neck injuries which put him in hospital for 10 days following a car crash two weeks ago.

KEEPS INTERST UP

The Blues had flattened out in the last weeks of the regular season, winning only five of their last 16 games.

"What I've been trying to do is keep the scrimmages interesting," Bowman said.

"The Seals could wrap it up tonight, fly in Friday and be on the ice the next day still with the momentum of the previous series.

"Our record is just about the same against Oakland and Los Angeles. You can't pick who you want to meet in the playoff, so why worry about it."

Bob Dillabough scored the go-ahead goal in the second period and an insurance tally in third to give Oakland a 4-1 victory over Los Angeles Wednesday night and their 3-2 edge.

LAUGHTON SCORES

Norm Ferguson scored the last goal of the game for Oakland at 16:43 of the third on a pass from Joe Szura.

Oakland wasted little time in the first period. Mike Laughton cashed in a perfect pass from right wing Bill Hicke at 1:06.

The Kings, sparked by Gerry Desjardins' goalkeeping, came back to tie it up at 15:51 on a goal by Gary Croteau.

Seal defenceman Carol Vadnais lost the puck to the Kings behind his own net and the puck came out to defenceman Dale Rolfe who shot at goalie Gary Smith. Croteau was right there for the rebound.

FIRST PERIOD
1. Oakland, Laughton (Hicke, Marshall) 1:06.
2. Los Angeles, Croteau (Rolfe) 13:51.
Penalties—none.
SECOND PERIOD
3. Oakland, Dillabough (Szura, Vadnais) 5:42.

OR CALL IT A EULOGY WITH PUNCH

TORONTO (CP) — George "Punch" Imlach may be gone from Maple Leaf Gardens but he's not forgotten at city hall.

City council voted Wednesday to hold a reception and dinner in honor of Imlach, fired Sunday as manager-Coach of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Controller Allen Lamport suggested the idea.

"We should do something for Punch so that the city of Toronto will remain a great city instead of being a sourpuss just because he lost one Stanley Cup series."

Bruins Critical Of Long Series

MONTREAL (CP) — The "hungry" Montreal Canadiens, under freshman coach Claude Ruel, set their sights on a ninth Stanley Cup in 14 seasons tonight in the opener of an East Division final against Boston Bruins.

Opening game of the Stanley Cup semifinal series between Boston Bruins and Canadiens in Montreal can be seen on Channels 2 and 6 starting at 5 p.m.

The two clubs start their best-of-seven series under a dragged-out playoff schedule which the Bruins' general manager, Milt Schmidt, says will be detrimental to his players.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, Wednesday turned a deaf ear to Schmidt's request that the series be telescoped.

Schmidt complained that the long layoff between games was dragging out the series unnecessarily, a view shared by his Montreal counterparts.

The second game is slated for Montreal Sunday afternoon with the series moving to Boston for Thursday and Sunday games next week.

Campbell explained that he was "endeavoring to make sure that by next Sunday (April 20), the final series in the East and the one in the West will have reached their fourth games."

The West Division final can't start earlier that next Saturday.

BLUES ARE READY

St. Louis Blues have already won their western semi-final by dropping Philadelphia Flyers in four games. Oakland Seals have a 3-2 edge in their best-of-seven semi-finals against Los Angeles Kings.

Montreal centre Jean Beliveau, meanwhile, is convinced that this season's edition of Montreal Canadiens is as "hungry for the cup" as the ones of other years.

They have won the cup a record eight times since 1955-56 under the guidance of coach Toe Blake who retired last year.

Beliveau said the club can count on both its older and younger players but admitted the series with Boston will be "a close one."

He said goaltending may prove to be the key of the series and the Bruins "have the best goaltending they have had in years" in Gerry Cheevers.

In Boston Wednesday, coach Harry Sinden confirmed that he will start Cheevers in tonight's game.

Carbonetto Joins Touring Ice Show

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Canadian figure skating champion Linda Carbonetto has signed a professional contract with Ice Capades, the show's president, George Eby, announced Wednesday.

Eby refused to disclose terms of the contract.

A Power Test In Island Open

Power off the tees could be a decisive factor Sunday when golfers tour the Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club course in the second round of the Times Vancouver Island Open tournament.

Included in the Island tourney's list of courses this year for the first time. Glen Meadows is a big layout, stretching 7,014 yards from the championship tees. It also demands accuracy but is most likely to be kind to the people who can pound long drives down the fairways.

Some indication of the difficulty of the par-72 McTavish Road course, southwest of Victoria International Airport, is the fact that the course record is 70, established by professional Bill Wakeham.

Sixteen survivors remain in each of the open and handicap sections after last Sunday's first-round matches at Oak Bay. Handicap contestants pursuing the Hugh Francis Trophy will start the chase at Glen Meadows, with the first pair going to work at 10 a.m.

Competitors in the open scramble for the Times Trophy start swinging at 10.56.

HOME THREATS

If home course knowledge is important, two men to watch could be club professional Dick Silverberg and southpaw Hal Jacobsen.

Silverberg, the former Albertan who took over the duties as head professional three months ago and has been too busy to play regular practice rounds, goes against Gorge Vale amateur Doug Austin.

The long-hitting Jacobsen, who has the shots to tame the Meadows, may need consistency to get by Al Brown, the steady junior from Uplands.

Medalist Don Billsborough, Norm Boden and Laurie Carroll join Silverberg on the list of pros still in the running. All face amateur foes Sunday, with Billsborough drawing Gorge Vale's Jim McColl.

TIMES OPEN DRAW

Starting times for second round matches in the Times Vancouver Island Open and handicap championships, to be played Sunday at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club:

HANDICAP DIVISION

Gorge, Wests Draw

Gorge Molson, who finished third in the Victoria and District Soccer League's first division after playing Victoria West to a 1-1 tie in the schedule-ender Wednesday night face another test in Royal Athletic Park on Sunday.

Canadian Scottish are scheduled to tackle Gorge at 2 p.m. in the final for the coveted Jackson Cup.

Wednesday night, approximately 250 fans watched the replay of a game originally awarded to Gorge by default. Wests won their appeal and with the draw, managed to take sole possession of fourth spot.

LAWSON TIED IT

Carrying most of the play, Wests forged ahead after nine minutes on a goal by Mike Beaulac but Dan Lawson tied the game with only eight minutes to play.

Also on tap Sunday is the first game of a promotion-relegation series between second-division Cosmopolitan Royals and Red Lion Inn of the first division. The first of a best-of-three series starts at 2 p.m. at Heywood Avenue Park.

Softball Loop Loses Nanaimo

Some major changes will be noticed in the senior men's softball league which operates out of Central Park.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Returning to list of Times' Bowler-of-the-Week winners for second straight year, Chuck Benfett nailed down men's tenpin award in 25th week of annual competition. Rolling 204-237-200—641 series in Wednesday Men's Commercial League at Mayfair Lanes also brought chance for cash and more honors in year-end rolloffs on May 11.

Sporting a new label — the Major Men's Softball League — the all-Victoria circuit will harbor only five teams, at least one new sponsor and new coaches when action commences on May 4.

League president John Oster announced that two Nanaimo entries were forced to drop out because of the commuting expenses.

"We didn't charge them any affiliation fee or anything last year," Oster said. "We were trying to rejuvenate the softball program in Nanaimo but it didn't work out. They still seemed to have trouble making ends meet."

Luckies, Bate Construction, Molsons and Red Lion Inn are back while Langford Drywall has taken over sponsorship of the former Carlings' team.

McCORKALL IN CHARGE

Workouts begin tonight or on the weekend.

Bates come under the guidance of manager Herb Bate with the coaching job, held last year by all-star centre-fielder Tom Bourne, being inherited by Lou McCorkall. Bourne will remain on the squad as a player. First workout for Bates is at 5 tonight in Central.

Molsons, under manager Russ Wilson and rookie coach Del Bertram, start workouts tonight at 6 and Sunday at 10 a.m. in Central Park.

Langford has scheduled its first workout for Saturday at Central Junior High School grounds at 10 a.m. Herb Wetherall will manage the team and Ernie Savoie will coach the club.

Manager-coach Ed Senini puts Red Lion players through their paces Sunday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Lansdowne Junior High while Luckies, under new manager Stretch Strank and coach Mickey Smith, are practising from 12 to 2 p.m. Sunday at Central Park.

Each team has 32 games to face with double-header action at the park on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Sundays.

Sugar Kings Cling To Playoff Hopes

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Lethbridge Sugar Kings erupted for three goals in the final period Wednesday night to defeat Regina Pats 5-4 for their first victory in the best-of-seven western Memorial Cup series.

The line of leftwinger Jerry Legrandeur, centre Darrel Knibbs and right winger Wayne Zuk collected 10 points to pace the Sugar Kings before 2,700 fans.

Regina leads the series 3-1 after earlier wins of 7-1, 8-1 and 6-5.

Fifth game will be played here tonight with the sixth, if necessary, in Lethbridge Saturday night.

Zuk scored two goals and assisted on two others as the Sugar Kings trailed 2-1 after the first period. The teams were tied 2-2 at the end of the second.

Len Chalmbers, Knibbs and Legrandeur got the other Lethbridge goals. Legrandeur and Knibbs each picked up two assists.

Ross Butler, Ron Garwasiuk, Larry Wright and Don Saleski replied for the Pats, who won the Saskatchewan Amateur Junior League championship.

The Pats took a 3-2 lead early in the first period when Wright connected at the 26-second mark but Lethbridge, Alberta Junior League champions, counted three consecutive goals before Regina completed the scoring.

Goaltender Gary Bromley of Regina stopped 29 shots and Don Hall of Lethbridge made 30 saves.

The Pats were assessed six of 10 minor penalties, with Garwasiuk getting three of them. Each team picked up a major.

Provincial Cup Battles Sunday

Two squads from the Lower Island Junior and Juvenile Soccer Association are involved in Provincial Cup semi-final struggles Sunday.

Victoria Boys' Club tackles Royal Canadian Legion No. 118 in Carnarvon Park at 2 p.m., while Victoria Evening Optimists travel to North Vancouver to take on North Shore Burdettes.

Rookie Back 'Pegged

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League Wednesday announced the signing of Doug Strong, a 192-pound halfback from Waterloo Lutheran who was their first choice in the Canadian college draft.

RICH TELEVISION PACT FOR MUNICH OLYMPIAD

MUNICH (AP)—The American Broadcasting Co. will pay $13,500,000 for the television rights to the 1972 summer Olympic Games in Munich, a spokesman for the Olympic organizing committee disclosed Wednesday.

The spokesman said the contract between the Munich Olympic organizing committee and ABC includes $7,500,000 for the exclusive rights for broadcast in the United States, plus $6,000,000 for costs involved in the actual production.

The contract still must be approved by the organization committee's executive board and the International Olympic Committee.

It was announced April 1 that ABC had submitted the highest bid for the U.S. television rights, but the amount was not disclosed then.

McDonald Sets Stylish Record

Former Victorian Ken McDonald is featured in the second 15-bout amateur fight card at Memorial Arena presented by London Soccer Club starting at 8 p.m. Saturday.

McDonald, who now fights for Vancouver Firefighters Club, captured titles at the Tacoma-Seattle and Portland Golden Gloves as well as at Vancouver. He also was named B.C.'s "Golden Boy" this year.

Ian Hunter of Langley will provide McDonald opposition in the 139-pound class battle Saturday.

Another former LBC member, Les Vegas, who will be boxing in a professional card in Vancouver the following weekend, is billed as guest referee.

Boxers representing Northwest Eagles will also be fighting.

Schedule of bouts:

1. Ian Pye (NWE) vs. Rick Eadie (Lang), 65 lbs.
2. Kevin Malcolm (LBC) vs. Reid Hanler-Jackson (NWE), 65 lbs.
3. Ray-Young (Lang) vs. Ian Douglas (NWE), 70 lbs.
4. Ron Way (LBC) vs. Clarence Hoolsema (NWE), 70 lbs.
5. Ricky Myra (LBC) vs. Guppy James (Lang), 70 lbs.
6. David Ius (NWS) vs. Douglas Evans (Lang), 75 lbs.
7. Gene Tait (LBC) vs. Les Hamilton (NWE), 90 lbs.
8. Phil Etheir (FF) vs. Gary Zuest (Lang), 90 lbs.
9. Craig Sequin (LBC) vs. Lanny Thom (Lang), 118 lbs.
10. Larry Gill (LBC) vs. Hugh Kelly (Lang), 125 lbs.
11. Dan Moore (LBC) vs. John Kelly (Lang), 125 lbs.
12. Mike Miller (LBC) vs. Ricky Zuest (Lang), 125 lbs.
13. Gordon Lawson (FF) vs. Gerry Evans (Lang), 147 lbs.
14. Alec Angelo Marcus (NWS) vs. George Angelos Marcus (NWE), 156 lbs.
15. Ken McDonald (FF) vs. Ian Hunter (Lang), 139 lbs.

Busy Firemen Neglected Call

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only one thing was missing Wednesday night at Callister Park here when Vanni Lenarduzzi ran down the field and banged in a goal that could possibly give Columbus the Pacific Coast Soccer League championship for the first time in the club's history: the other team!

For Vancouver Firefighters, scheduled to meet in the key PCSL encounter, did not show up.

But Columbus turned up. So did the game officials and several hundred fans.

Bill Legge, PCSL vice-chairman, said the Firefighters Secretary, Al Lenfesty, telephoned him about 6 p.m. to say the firemen could muster only about six players because of departmental duties.

The league executive now has to decide whether to award the game — and thus the championship — to Columbus, or to set another date for the encounter.

A decision is expected to be made on the weekend.

Cliff's Spree Sparks Bucks

PORTLAND (AP) — Cliff Schmautz worked a three-goal hat trick Wednesday night to give Portland a 5-1 victory over San Diego and a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven semi-finals of the Western Hockey League.

The series moves to San Diego this evening for the sixth game and the seventh, if needed, will be played back in Portland.

Dennis Huculak scored on a power play to give San Diego a 1-0 lead at 2:37 of the first period. Portland tied the game at 10:36 of the middle period when Connie Madigan slapped a shot from the blue line while Portland skated short-handed.

Schmautz then got the first of three goals on an unassisted play at 14:19 of the middle period and added two more in the final period for the hat trick.

Jimmie McLeod was outstanding in goal for Portland with 29 saves, stopping four San Diego breakaways in the opening period.

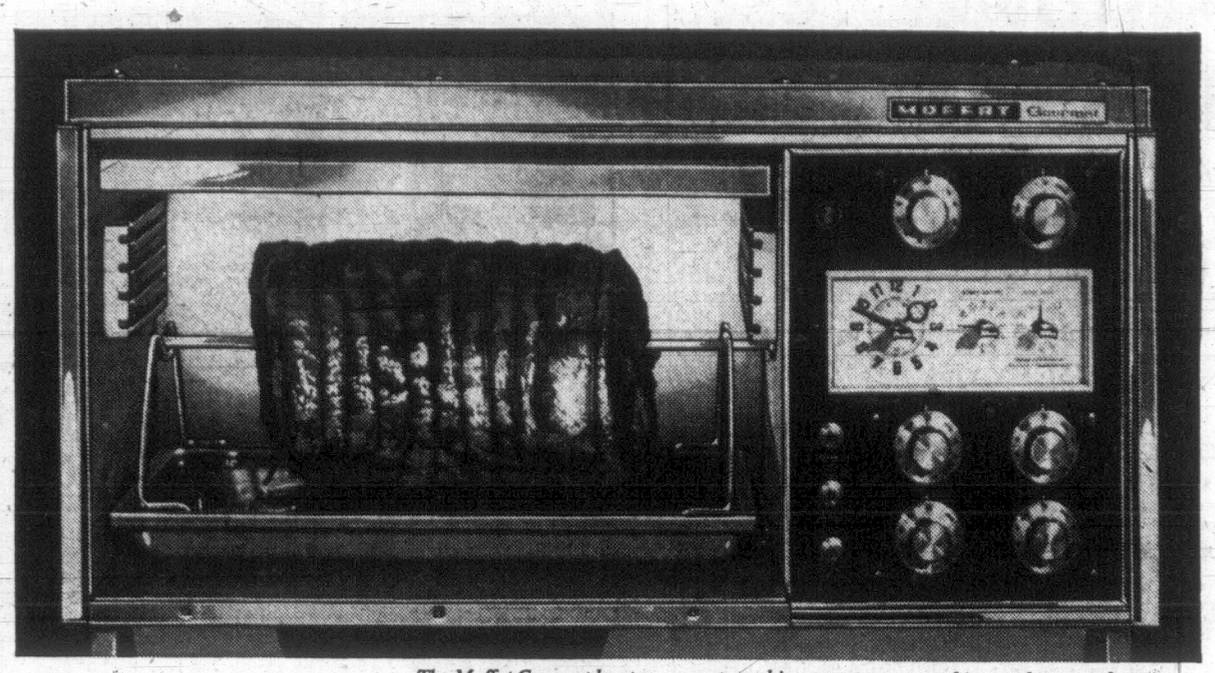
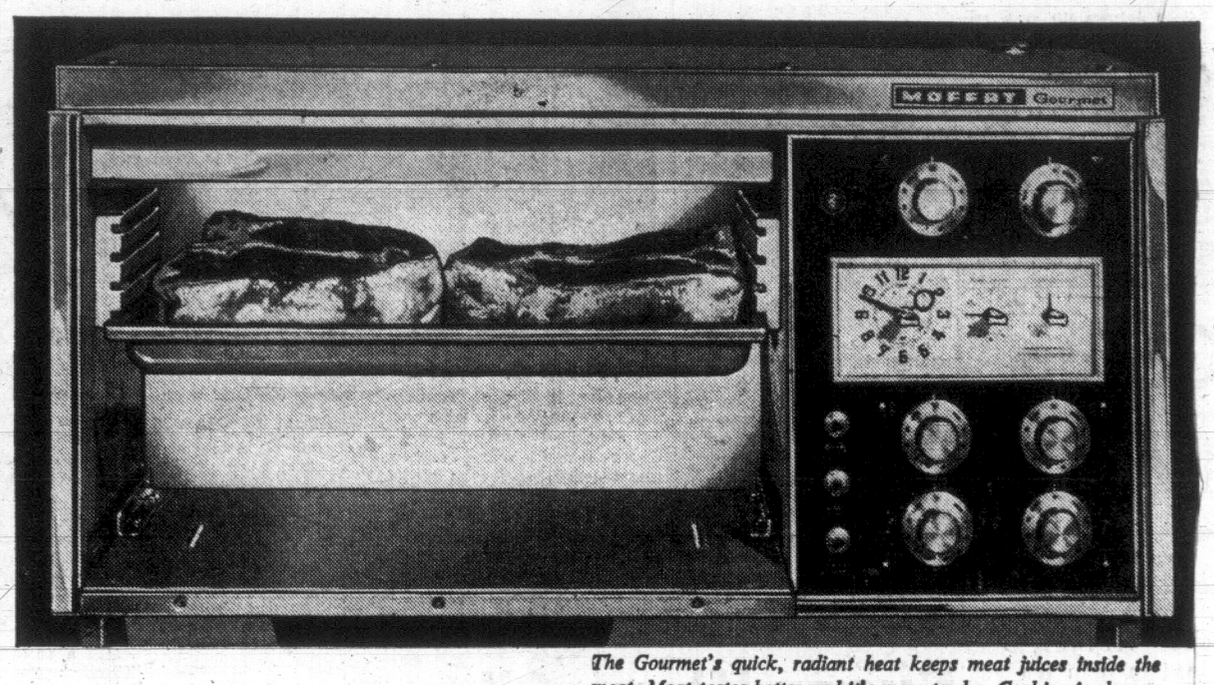
The broiling-roasting compartment of the Gourmet is big enough for almost anything you'll want to cook. Even a fifteen-pound roast.



The Moffat Gourmet has two separate cooking compartments: a big, regular oven plus an eye-level cooking compartment where quick, radiant heat broils and roasts without a mess.



The Gourmet's quick, radiant heat keeps meat juices inside the meat. Meat tastes better and it's more tender. Cooking is cleaner.

"You can broil a steak without a mess. And bake a pie at the same time. Isn't this Moffat Gourmet marvellous?"

Mrs. Susan Poston

THE MOFFAT GOURMET (electric or gas) can bake, broil, roast, boil, warm, defrost, simmer, sauté, sear, grill, brown, and toast. And what's more it can do at least three different things at once.

It can roast on a spit while it bakes in a pan while it simmers in a saucepan. It can preserve peaches, warm the baby's bottle, perk the coffee, bake a cake, and spit-roast two chickens at the same time. And it can barbecue as well as your husband (but don't tell him we said so).

Moffat's Gourmet Range has two completely separate cooking compartments. There's a big, regular oven plus an eye-level cooking compartment where quick, radiant heat lets you broil and roast without a mess. It's practically spatter-free.

"Roasting with a rotisserie keeps the juices in the meat. When I roast pork in my oven it shrinks away to nothing."

In the upper compartment high-temperature radiant heat sears meat and seals in the juices just the way your outdoor barbecue does. This holds the flavour and reduces shrinkage. Then lower-temperature cooking takes over, and the temperature of the sealed-in flavour juices rises gradually. These juices actually break down and tenderize the fibrous lean meat structure.

While the meat broils or roasts, the fat drips down into the broiler pan below the grid. Because all the heat is concentrated on the meat, this broiler pan stays relatively cool, and so does the fat. There's almost no spattering so the compartment sides stay clean.

"Spatter-free broiling and lift-out parts must make this range very easy to clean."

Because radiant heat can be controlled, you can set the compartment temperature. This means you won't limit compartment cooking to broiling and spit-roasting. You'll glaze fish. You'll warm plates, buns, and pies. You'll heat up leftovers. You'll grill bacon and toast sandwiches. You'll brown meringue pies. And you'll defrost frozen foods—fast!

The Gourmet compartment is big enough for almost anything you want to cook. It'll broil a five-pound sirloin; eight lamb chops, two pounds of sausages, or a pound and a half of bacon. And it will spit-roast a 15-pound rolled roast.

If you celebrate Christmas or Thanksgiving with a 20-pound turkey, it will slip easily into the lower oven.

But most of the time you'll use the lower oven for casseroles, pies, cakes, cookies, and maybe even bread.

When you do clean the Gourmet compartment, it's easy. The top, back, and bottom panels slip out, and you can wash them in the sink. And the cooking top is easy to clean. Burner elements pull out so you can wash the drip bowls and chrome rings in the sink too.

You'll never have to worry about messy spillovers with a Moffat Gourmet. The cooking top is recessed and spill guards prevent spillovers from dribbling down between your range and cupboards.

This recessed top also gives the Gourmet a custom, built-in look. The range sides fit flush with your counter top.

And the finish on a Moffat Gourmet wipes clean in a flash. It's the same porcelain finish you get on expensive bone china. It will never stain or rust.

"If I had a Gourmet I could put a casserole in the oven, go do my shopping, and find dinner ready to serve when I get home. That's the range for me."

A Gourmet oven will do your cooking while you're out. It has an easy to use electric clock timer that turns the oven on whenever you want and leaves it on for as long as you like. You can even set it to start your electric coffee maker before you wake up.

The Gourmet range is better than ordinary ranges in other ways too.

The oven, like every Moffat oven, is better insulated so heat never leaks out. This means the cooking temperature stays even, exactly where you set it.

Moffat ovens preheat faster than other ovens. It takes a Moffat oven only six minutes to preheat to 350 degrees. Other ovens take as long as 15 minutes. Moffat ovens heat faster because the broil element helps the bake element bring up the temperature.

The oven door has a big window, so you don't have to keep opening the door to see how things are cooking.

The burners on a Moffat Gourmet are especially designed to heat up fast and cool off quickly. And they always give you a steady, even heat. They're made with a single coil so that every part of the burner is at exactly the same temperature.

With a Moffat Gourmet you have more control over the heat of your burners. You can dial whatever degree of heat you want.

The Moffat Gourmet is safe.

You don't have to worry about children turning on the range. All the switches are up high where children can't reach them.

You don't have to worry about scalding your hand over steaming pots when you reach for one of these switches. They're a good safe distance from the cooking top.

You don't have to worry about turning on the wrong burner by mistake. Our control panel is easy to understand.

"When I'm busy I often forget the range is on. And that really scares me. These warning lights always remind me."

You don't have to worry about leaving the burners, Gourmet compartment, or oven on by mistake. There are special warning lights.

There's no installation problem with a Moffat Gourmet. The range is 30 inches wide and less than five feet high. It fits easily under regular height cupboards.

There are four Moffat Gourmet models: three electric and one gas. One of the electric models has a self-cleaning lower oven. You can set the oven to clean itself. You can also clean some parts of the Gourmet compartment as well as the burner drip bowls in the self-cleaning oven.

The Moffat Gourmet is available in Harvest, Avocado, Antique Copper, and White. You can get Moffat Dishwashers and Frost-Free Refrigerators in matching colours too. Wouldn't a colour-co-ordinated Moffat kitchen be a treat?

Campbell Refuses Ransom

TORONTO (CP) — Police continued their search today for three National Hockey League trophies stolen from the Hockey Hall of Fame in the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The thefts were discovered early Wednesday when Lefty Reid, curator, arrived at work. He reported the Calder, Conn Smythe and original Hart trophies were missing as well as two sets of medals from the Sports Hall of Fame, located in the same building.

In Montreal, NHL president Clarence Campbell said:

"There is no way in which we would consider co-operating if asked to pay ransom for the return of the trophies.

"We could be prepared to pay a reasonable reward, but only through the police."

Campbell, surprised over the theft, since the trophies would be almost impossible to sell and their melted-down value would not justify the risks taken, added:

"If anybody really wanted them that badly, we would gladly supply them with miniatures of each of them."

However, if the trophies are not found, winners of the individual trophies will have to accept the miniatures which Mr. Campbell says are available.

REMOVE THE LOCK

Entrance to the building was gained by taking the cylinder lock out of one of the main doors. The thief, or thieves, also tried to take the Lou Marsh trophy presented annually to the outstanding Canadian athlete. They apparently were thwarted by the weight of the solid marble pillar.

Reid said he could not place a value on the missing articles.

"Unofficially, I'd have to say they were worth a total of about $10,000. But how can you put a value on trophies like that?"

All were made of silver.

The Hart Trophy was first presented in 1923 and retired in 1960 because it looked shoddy. It is for the NHL's most valuable player.

The Calder Trophy goes to the league's outstanding rookie and the Smythe Trophy for the best player in Stanley Cup playoffs.

Also stolen were about 100 medals won by Fred J. Robson of Toronto in the late 1880s and early 1900s for speedskating and another 40 presented to Dan Bain, Manitoba's outstanding athlete during the same time and captain of two Stanley Cup teams.

Reid said: "Whoever it is has to be a kook. None of these trophies is marketable. It's like stealing a Rembrandt. What would they ever do with them?"

Record Day For Openers

NEW YORK (AP)—The opening day attendance total of 401,310 for the 12 openers of major league baseball set a record. The previous high was 336,528 in 1960 when the majors numbered 16 teams.

The average at the Monday and Tuesday openers this year was 33,443, topped by the 53,574 that saw Detroit open at Tiger Stadium against Cleveland.

The National League games drew 213,297 and the American League 188,013 paid.

Beverley Fifth In Diving Meet

LONG BEACH, Calif. (CP) — Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., placed fifth Wednesday in the women's three-metre springboard diving event at the National Amateur Athletic Union swimming and diving championships.

Cynthia Potter of Houston, Tex., waited until her last dive to win the event from Jerrie Adair of Cypress, Calif. Olympic-champion Milena Duchkova of Czechoslovakia finished fourth and Barbara Schaefer of Bloomington, Ind., third.

Nancy Robertson of Edmonton was eighth.

In the men's one-metre event, Jim Henry, bronze medal winner in the Olympics defeated Mike Finneran of Santa Clara, Calif. Chuck Knorr of Columbus, Ohio, was third.

BOMBER PROSPECT

WINNIPEG (CP) — George John Barrow, a 24-year-old tackle who played with Charleston Rockets of the Continental League last season, has been signed by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference.

Bears Bounce Back To Clip Bison Squad

By The Canadian Press

Hershey Bears wiped out a two-goal deficit and went on to defeat Buffalo Bisons 4-2 in the opening game of their American Hockey League Calder Cup playoffs Wednesday night.

The best-of-seven semi-final continues Saturday with a game at Buffalo.

In other playoff action Wednesday night, Baltimore Clippers defeated Providence Reds 4-2 and Cleveland Barons edged Quebec Aces 2-1 in the opening games of their best-of-five quarter-finals.

Buffalo took an early 2-0 lead on goals by Guy Trottier and Norm Beaudin, but Hershey tied it on goals by Chuck Hamilton and Don Marcotte and went ahead on a goal by Ted Snell. Michel Harvey scored in an empty net in the final minute when Buffalo pulled its goalie in favor of another attacker.

At Baltimore, Jim Morrison scored two goals against Providence and Willie Marshall and Jim Bartlett scored the others for the Clippers. Dick Meissner and John Sleaver scored for the Reds.

The quarter-finals also continue Saturday with Providence at Baltimore and Quebec at Cleveland.

PAIR OF ACES CHALKED UP IN ONE ROUND

SEATTLE (AP) — Tom Rudy of Seattle University scored two holes in one only six holes apart at the Sand Point Golf Club Tuesday.

He used a wedge on the 145-yard ninth to bounce the ball into the cup. On the 150-yard 15th hole, he hit a six iron and again the ball bounced into the hole.

For his round, Rudy scored a 70, two under par.

New Judicial Recount Expected by Durante

Defeated Comox-Alberni Liberal candidate Richard Durante said Wednesday a judicial recount will be needed before the byelection results can be considered final.

Durante said he believed there were "irregularities" in the vote count that returned the riding to veteran NDP MP Tom Barnett Tuesday.

Barnett reclaimed the seat with 254 votes more than the Liberal who defeated him in the June 25 general election.

(Final count totals showed Barnett with 12,611, Durante 12,357 and Progressive Conservative candidate Blair McLean, 2,350.)

The June results went out the window with a court ruling that some armed services personnel who voted in the riding were registered in other ridings.

NINE VOTES

Durante won the earlier election by nine votes after a judicial recount.

Durante told the Times he believes "there have been some irregularities" as a result of the election night rush to finish the unofficial ballot count.

His final decision to ask for a judicial count will not be made until the official count is completed April 17, said Durante.

He pointed out that with the slim victory margin, an error of 100 or 200 votes in the preliminary count could be crucial.

Durante said the fact that the Liberals increased their June vote indicated that the earlier win was not attributable solely to the appeal of Prime Minister Trudeau. He suggested it indicated a solid core of support in the up-Island riding.

JOB SEEKER

A former Port Alberni high school principal, Durante left the city Wednesday for Ottawa "to collect my personal effects." He will return to look for a job, he said.

He acted as MP until January when the court decision was handed down.

Expensive Cheers

BANGKOK (AP) — Cheer leaders at Thai schools have nothing to cheer about. Dr. Boonsom Martin, director-general of physical education, ordered the schools to eliminate frills in sports parades and cheering performances because they are too expensive. "Expenditures must be cut to a minimum since the value of sports is not in the beauty of the cheering squads alone," he said.

DUNCAN SCOUT HONORED

DUNCAN — Wesley Klettke of Duncan was among 300 Scouts in British Columbia to receive Queen Scout certificates in ceremonies today at Government House in Victoria.

A member of First Somenos Scout Troop, the 15-year-old is the only Scout from the Cowichan Valley to be so honored this year. He received the badge in November and has earned 20 merit badges in four years in Scouts.

Two navy destroyers were to take the Scouts to Esquimalt for presentation ceremonies by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson.

Third Man Seeks Seat On Board

DUNCAN—Marina operator Kurt Horn Wednesday added his name to the list of candidates for the North Cowichan vacancy on Cowichan District School Board.

The resignation of Alastair MacDonald created the vacancy.

Earlier this week investment broker Fred Vazz Zantvoort, 33, of Maple Bay and employment supervisor David Haywood, 27, of Quamichan Heights announced candidacy.

Nominations for the vacant trusteeship close May 9 and the byelection is scheduled for May 17.

Mr. Horn said he welcomed the chance to complete Mr. MacDonald's term which expires in December.

"It would be an ideal test of whether or not I can devote the time away from my business," he said.

Man Fined $700

NANAIMO (CP)—Bernard James Leslie, 22, of Nanaimo, was fined a total of $700 in magistrate's court Wednesday after he had pleaded guilty to theft and attempted theft charge and two Motor Vehicle Act charges.

School Board Merger Urged At Cowichan

LAKE COWICHAN — A suggestion by a Cowichan District school board trustee that Cowichan District and Lake Cowichan school boards amalgamate to save money and share the benefits from larger enrolment is being studied by the school board here.

Terry Taylor, a Youbou principal and vice-chairman of Cowichan District School Board, said one advantage of amalgamation would be that a vocational wing at the senior secondary school at Duncan would be available to Lake Cowichan students.

He said Duncan had been able to obtain the school wing because of their higher enrolment and at small cost to district residents. Such a wing would not be obtainable by smaller districts, he said.

SECOND STOREY

Taylor said, "If other districts joined us and expansion was required it should be possible to obtain funds from the federal and provincial governments to add a second level."

He made his comments at a school board meeting. Another advantage, he said, would be if a teacher ran into difficulty in her first year of teaching but had tremendous potential she would be able to transfer to an amalgamated school and "would not be lost to the district."

Quantity purchasing at better rates, reduction in overlapping office staff and making specialists available to smaller districts, were other advantages.

GLUE TO TRIP SNIFFERS OUT

TORONTO (CP) — A firm in neighboring Mississauga could become unpopular with glue-sniffers. It's adding a foul-smelling ingredient to its cement products.

Testor Corp. of Canada Ltd., whose parent company in Illinois developed the ingredient, is offering the formula to any manufacturers interested.

A company spokesman said the ingredient, a volatile mustard oil, will cause the eyes to water if inhaled.

Farm Courses Recommended For Malaspina

NANAIMO — Agricultural courses and appointment of an agricultural department director are recommended in a brief presented to Malaspina College authorities here.

The biref prepared by Lloyd Cooke and Joe Shook, was endorsed by the Vancouver Island Exhibition Society Tuesday.

In planning a campus, it also urged construction of agricultural buildings on the grounds.

The island's farm industry had not progressed very far during the past 100 years, the brief noted. In 1968 meat production provided only enough to feed 30,000 people.

It felt the island was best suited for diary and beef herds.

Oats and cron could be grown locally for green feed and fodder and the grains imported from the mainland or prairies, the brief said.

Secret Vote Plan Said Undemocratic

DUNCAN—An attempt by chairman Alex Smith to institute secret balloting "on controversial issues" at Cowichan Valley Regional Board meetings was soundly denounced as "undemocratic" by member directors Wednesday night.

The vote was taken again but not before John Cannon from North Cowichan said the action was "highly irregular and out of order.

"If I can't vote in the open so the press can report it to the public, I don't want any part of it."

Smith said he did not wish to set a precedent but "whenever there is a slightly controversial issue people always tend to be swayed by the voting of their neighbors."

The vote was on a motion by director A. K. MacKinnon to apply for membership in the Union of British Columbia Municipalities and was approved by a vote of 8 to 2.

DARK AGES

Cannon said the secret ballot process "went out in the dark ages" and "If a person doesn't vote as his conscience dictates he shouldn't be on this board."

A half dozen other dissenters leaped into the fray. Bruce Devitt and Jim Moore of Ladysmith echoed the comment that they had "never seen anything like this before."

J. F. Dobell of Saltair denounced the move as "undemocratic" and moved that the vote be taken again, this time "out in the open."

The motion, seconded by Devitt, ended in the same result.

It is the second time that Smith has come under attack for his attitude towards the press and public information. Earlier this year he set up a committee to "screen news" because he said "too many directors are going out on the street and discussing things that should not be discussed outside this chamber."

This plan also was denounced by Cannon and H. A. Warner of Mill Bay.

MacKinnon, chairman of the publicity and public relations committee has yet to report on a meeting but said Wednesday night one was scheduled for next week.

Sound Traps for Drivers Planned

By JOHN DARNTON

STAMFORD, Conn. — Connecticut highways, which have long been among the busiest in the nation, may soon become the quietest.

The state has initiated a program to crack down on "noise pollution" from motor vehicles—by installing electronic equipment to measure their sound levels and track down those that are too loud.

Within a hear, the program is expected to yield a highly sensitized noise-detection device, the size of a suitcase, that may be used by police along roadsides to set up "sound traps" in the way that radar is used for "speed traps."

HOW MUCH?

"We have to come out of this with some sort of device that can point to a car and say, 'this is too noisy'," said Benjamin Bauer, vice-president in charge of acoustics at CBS laboratories here. The laboratory is under a $96,000 contract from the Connecticut Research Commission to develop the system.

The program is divided into two separate "tasks," explained Bauer. The first, a three-month study in which noises will be recorded at 35 locations along major highways, is to determine exactly how much noise can be considered excessive.

The second is to develop an instrument that can be placed within earshot of faulty mufflers and "whining tires" and automatically pick out and photograph violations from a moving field of vehicles.

The first phase of the project was demonstrated recently to newsmen, technicians and state officials at the Greenwich tool booth on the Merritt Parkway.

As cars and trucks of all sizes and sounds pulled in and out of the gates, their movements were plotted by jumping needles, waving lines, and zigzagging lights from a battery of machines on a rectangular table 20 feet from the curb.

Several hundred yards down the parkway were four 10-foot-high tripods, spaced at intervals. A cylinder containing a highly sensitive microphone was suspended from each tripod.

SUDDEN ROAR

For demonstration purposes, the microphones were switched over to a loudspeaker and a tractor was dispatched in their direction, but as it approached, and as its grinding sound was just being picked up, there was a sudden roar that seemed to shake the table and send the needles spinning. An airplane flew overhead. "That's our next job," remarked one official.

The purpose of the field study is to compile a "library" of noises, varying across distance, time of day, weather, surface pavement conditions and even surrounding vegetation.

An analysis of the data, it is hoped, will lead to a quantitative measurement, in decibels, of an acceptable level of noise to strengthen enforcement of the law.

UNUSUAL NOISE

"The problem has been that the noise is so broadly stated . . . in terms of 'unusual noise'. . . that it's difficult to win a case in court," remarked Dr. Warren C. Stoker, chairman of the research commission.

Some members of the research team thought that the legal limit on noise would be fixed at about 85 decibels; it is generally accepted that sound pressure levels of 100 decibels are the maximum tolerance for the human ear and that continuous exposure to higher levels can impair hearing.

MEDICAL JOURNAL CUT BY NEW POSTAL RATES

TORONTO (CP)—Increased postal rates have forced the Canadian Medical Association Journal to cut its number of issues by half.

Effective July 1, the Journal, with a circulation of 23,000, will publish every two weeks instead of weekly, says managing editor Dr. Arthur Kelly.

Dr. Kelly said new postal rules, which classify the Journal as third-class mail, will increase the cost of mailing each copy to 13 cents from 1½.

Sikhs Win This Battle With British

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (AP) — The Bearded Sikhs of India, who lost two wars to the British a century ago, won a battle Wednesday against this industrial city.

Transport officials surrendered and agreed that Sikhs could work on the city's buses and wear their beards and turbans instead of the regulation uniform.

The battle was led by a 63-year-old Sikh leader named Sohan Singh Jolly, who had threatened to set himself on fire Sunday unless Wolverhampton's transport committee lifted its ban on turbanned busmen.

The dispute began two years ago when the committee made its anti-turban rule.

Since their religious sect began in India Punjab district 500 years ago, Sikhs have refused to shave their beards or cut their hair, which they bind in turbans.

Russians Call NATO War Threat

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet government Wednesday night published a fiercely-worded attack on NATO, called for an end to the division of the world into military blocs, and renewed its appeal for an all-European security conference.

A 2,000-word statement published by the official news agency Tass on the eve of the 20th anniversary of the NATO ministerial council session in Washington described the alliance as "the main obstacle to the safeguarding of international security."

Observers thought the main aim of the document was to persuade the smaller NATO countries in Europe to quit the 15-nation alliance.

The statement also reaffirmed the Kremlin leaders' belief in the desirability of disarmament talks.

Greeks Relax Rules

ATHENS (AP) — Premier George Papadopoulos announced Wednesday night the restoration of three suspended constitutional articles, including the inviolability of the home and the right of assembly.

The articles were among the 12 suspended since the army-backed regime put a new 137-article charter into force last November.

The third article which went into effect immediately is the right to form associations, including trade unions.

Papadopoulos also announced that the files of about 1,800 political prisoners will be reviewed to decide whether their sentences should be suspended, reduced, or prolonged.

The measure, he said, will not apply to those regarded as dangerous to public order.

Agriculturist Head Named

A former Victorian, Dr. Thomas H. Anstey, director of the federal research station in Lethbridge, has been elected president-elect of the Agricultural Institute of Canada for 1969-70.

The institute is a professional association representing more than 3,000 professional agriculturists.

Born in Victoria, he obtained his BSA and MSc degrees from the University of British Columbia, specializing in horticulture. He later obtained a Ph.D degree in horticulture and genetics from the Univeristy of Minnesota.

Since 1959, he has been in charge of the Lethbridge research station.

Mythical Disease Slows Penny Down

By PENNY SAVER

I do believe I've contracted that mythical disease, spring fever. All the symptoms are present: extreme weariness, along with a massive indifference to everything and anything. In addition to this I have noticed a certain clumsiness of movement—my fingers, for instance, are having great difficulty manoeuvring the keyboard of this typewriter. Sometimes I think the typewriter has spring fever too since it has developed the alarming habit of jamming its keys, interpreted by me as a non-violent method of protesting the injustice of work. Another of my spring fever symptons is a muzziness of mind. My forgetfulness quotient has risen 15 points and my editor complains that my ability to perceive spelling mistakes (always rather low) has sunk to a record depth. She suggests a whopping good dose of spring tonic, but fortunately neither of us knows the recipe.

Since I am much too lazy to do anything myself, I would love to infect energetic Gladys with my spring fever. Unfortunately she seems immune. Just the other day she came rushing over and dragged me off for an exhausting day of shopping for just the right buttons to finish her knitted cape. To me any buttons would do, but Gladys refused to rest until she had found the best buttons of all.

The buttons she finally picked were made of enamelled copper. These buttons are hand-crafted by a Vancouver artist and cost 75 or 80 cents a card. A card can contain from three to six buttons and there is a choice between shank and two-hole styles. The colors? Well, wild. There are speckled buttons, plain buttons and multi-hued buttons in sparkling enamel shades of orange-red, yellow, blue, purple or turquoise.

Pottery Buttons

These enamel buttons are quite large and flashy—the kind of buttons that "make" an outfit. Many knitted items, I feel, demand something more subdued, though they deserve something a little special. That is why I favor pottery buttons for hand-made cardigans. These buttons are quite small and come in both shank and two-hole styles. Since pottery often "sags" just a little before firing their shapes are soft and rather organic. Naturally, no button is exactly like another. Made by a Victoria potter, these buttons are $3 a string. Each string contains eight or 10 buttons. The colors are varied ranging from soft yellows and beiges to deep rusts and browns.

I have discovered a beautiful way to scent sheets, towels, stationery, or anything else that will fit in a box, drawer or suitcase. The secret lies in a box of small flower-shaped sachets that come in lavender, rose, and two versions of mixed floral scents. These sachets will not leave a dusting of crushed dried petals the way gauze sachets often do. A box of 24 is $3.95 and makes a wonderful gift item.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Students Plan Japanese Night

Discussing decorations, including Japanese flags, for a Japanese Night to be held this evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Provincial Museum auditorium, are Miss Junie Harris, president of the Japanese Club of the University of Victoria with vice-president Yojiro Ii, left, and Katsuyoshi Tsutsumi. The program will include samisen music, Japanese dancing, a demonstration of flower arranging, and films and slides titled An Invitation to Japan. Guest speaker will be Mr. John Southworth, commissioner of the B.C. Pavilion for Expo 70 in Osaka next year. Tea and Japanese refreshments will be served after the show, which starts at 8:30 p.m. There was a special showing for school children only at 2:30 in the afternoon. (Robin Clarke Photo)

The Bedouin Princess, which may well be the widest harem outfit in the world will be modelled in Victoria Monday when the local chapter of Hadassah presents an all-Israeli fashion show. It is of hand-woven wool bordered with beaded braid hand sewn by Arab women. (P.I.C. photo.)

Israel Puts Fun in Fashions Coming to Victoria Monday

It's about six feet high and eight feet wide, and it looks like a tent on a clothes hanger, except that it's gold colored pure wool, hand-woven and lavishly embroidered with sequins, beads and braid.

It is a harem outfit, one of the delightfully outrageous garments to be shown at an all Israeli fashion show Monday in the Newcombe auditorium of the Provincial Museum. Victoria Chapter of Hadassah is sponsoring the afternoon and evening showings at 2:30 and 4:30 p.m.

The clothes range from the voluminous harem outfit to the other extreme—mini-bikinis.

FOR NON-SWIMMERS

Speaking of bathing suits, there is a beauty for non-swimmers. It's made of silver lurex with a little blue silk ruffle at the high neckline—and matching ruffles to wear at the wrists.

Another innovation for the beach is the monster sombrero hat that matches a bright print bathing suit. As one of the Hadassah members pointed out, there's more material in the hat than in the bathing suit.

Helen Beirnes, who is organizing the local show for Hadassah, had to find the tallest models available for the sophisticated evening gowns.

HIGH COLLARS

They all have demure wedding band collars—but some are slit from collar to the waist, and one is slit from hem to above knee-length.

Fashion-show convener Aileen Barer says "its an extraordinary thing, but we seem to be selling as many tickets to men as to women."

The show includes conservative suits and dresses, leather outfits and hand-knits. One tweed suit has a pure silk blouse printed in a perfectly matching tweed pattern.

Some of the outfits will be shown in children's sizes, too.

But not the mermaid cocktail dress. Yards of silk cut on the bias was corded into strips and interlaced by hand, to give an open work pattern over sheer chiffon. It has a definitely bare look about it.

All proceeds from Fashions Foremost will be used in the rehabilitation of children through Youth Aliyah, a Hadassah-sponsored program of rescue, settlement and education.

Tickets are available from Hadassah members, or at Rose's Jewellers, Foster's Furs, the Posy Shop, Maison George and Capital Iron and Metals.

Toastmistresses Compete Sunday

Top speakers from six Vancouver Island Toastmistress clubs will compete Sunday at Qualicum Beach Inn. Mrs. W. A. Ludlow, council chairman, will preside over the meeting and contest which will begin at 3 p.m. Awards will be presented at the dinner which will follow, beginning at 5 p.m.

Junior Size Pants Suits Imitate Grown-Up Styles

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Women who think that somehow a lot of current fashion doesn't seem to be quite right for them may have a point. Just look at the same thing on kids, and suddenly the matter's cleared up. Most of the current looks are really made for kids.

Take pants. Despite all the fashion furore over pants, pant suits, evening pants and whatnot pants, who really looks best in pants? Kids, of course, who have been wearing nothing else for years before the grownup females wore much more than sports pants.

This spring's fashion picture for little girls is therefore full of all the same pants styles seen in adult fashions, from straight through flared to elephant widths.

Another current fashion idea which looks best on kids is the bared midriff. Frequently, it appears combined with pants, as in Regal's flowered gingham pants set, with the flared leg silhouette and a top with ruffled hem and ruffled puff sleeves. As it's gingham, it naturally comes in pink or blue.

But bared midriff pants looks also come in tailored versions. Red, white and navy checks or plaids are the theme in these.

While play pants, bared or not, are hardly new for youngsters, the dress-up pants look is, just as it's new for women. Tunics, long enough to be worn as mini dresses by themselves, go over flared pants, done in bright prints, such as apples of various greens on white or multi-colored field flowers on white or yellow grounds.

Another adult trend which is a natural for little girls is the costume look. Last year's emphasis on leather and fake leathers takes on new life in the Western and Indian costumes which have always been a part of children's play lives, but are now one of the fashion costume favorites. For lovers of romance, there's the peasant look, in suspender skirts and pants with Tyrolean embroideries, both to be worn with white blouses which have the gathered neckline and sleeves.

A great take-off on the slide by Sean Davidson amuses his friends waiting their turn on the jungle gym at Gonzales co-operative play school. The children start their day with free play before settling down to more serious efforts such as painting or planting corn gardens in egg cartons to learn how plants grow.

The critic at left is Dianne Bass, who appears unimpressed with finger-painting technique of Toni Allen. One dainty finger isn't nearly as much fun as the whole-hand method, but both end in a gloriously-satisfying work of art to take home and hang up on the wall.

CO-OP SYSTEM KEEPS COSTS DOWN

Schools Stress Parent Involvement

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

One of the greatest differences between co-operative pre-school groups and public or private nursery schools is parent participation.

It is this parent involvement which, say enthusiastic supporters of the co-op system, is of tremendous value to the family as a whole.

Mrs. Janet Harmsworth, a former teacher who is now vice-president of the Vancouver Island Co-operative Pre-School Association, explained how they work.

A co-op group is owned and operated by parents of pre-school children, with each group responsible for its own finances. The group is licensed by the provincial Welfare Institutions Licensing Board, and employs a competently trained teacher to direct the program. The teacher also trains mothers to become assistants.

"In this group (Gonzales) it works out that each mother has a morning only about once a month," she continued.

But there are further benefits.

- The relatively lower cost of co-operatively run groups brings them within reach of more families.
- Through a planned program of parent education, including speakers, films, literature and discussion groups, parents gain experience in understanding the needs of the pre-school child.
- The mother's interest communicates itself to the father, and this results in a child-parent-teacher relationship most desirable in the education process.
- A mother who helps and observes in the play room often discovers unexpected reserves of patience, tact and ingenuity in the classroom situation which can carry over at home, making her a better parent to all her children.

But as in all good nursery schools the emphasis is on providing the best possible program for the pre-school child.

Children in the Gonzales group start the morning with free play, then move to other activities of their choice. There are also group projects—a current one is growing corn gardens in egg cartons.

Story-telling has an important place in the program, and the children grow to love books. One little boy was carefully matching a set of plastic dinosaur models to pictures in his dinosaur book.

With parents' help, the children are taken on expeditions.

One, this year, will be to a dairy farm to see the cows, then to a creamery. Some groups have been to the airport, the museum, and to the book hospital at the library where they see what happens when a book is mistreated. Trips to beaches and to the woods are planned for warmer weather.

The co-op association is already making plans and taking registrations for next year. Mrs. Harmsworth says that anyone interested in learning more about the groups may contact Mrs. John Kozak, 385-5637.

As well as the Gonzales group, there are co-operative nursery schools at Colquitz, Gordon Head, Lansdowne, Cedar Hill, Metchosin and Elk Lake.

Anyone interested in forming a new group in another district may contact Mrs. Laurie Wilson, 477-4977.

Little boys love to paste, and egg cartons make wonderful paste pots which, if tipped, don't break. They just make a lovely mess. Mrs. Grace Kozak, one of the mothers who assists at the Gonzales Co-OP, admires the creations of Bob Finlay, left, and Darron Craig. The finished articles were decorated with buttons.

At last he's got it. Garth Richmond concentrated on his plasticine and wood creation for twenty minutes, pounding it into shape, rolling it with a rolling pin and building a pyramid of sticks. He nearly gave up when the construction work kept toppling, but went back to finish his intricate sculpture in triumph.

CLUBWOMEN'S NEWS

New Member — Miss G. Rae was installed as a new member when Royal Roads Chapter, IODE, met recently at the home of Mrs. David Low. Two guests were present, Miss A. Llewellyn and Mrs. W. Esau. Plans for the book and record booth at The May IODE Festival were finalized and bursaries for 1969 were discussed. It was voted to give the George H. Gardiner Memorial bursary, the bursary to the Wynne Shaw Dance School and contributions to municipal projects. Miss Rattray, educational secretary, reported that Miss Colleen DeConte, a former ballet bursary winner, has been chosen for further lessons in England. Reports were also given by Mrs. J. C. F. Blowey, Mrs. E. Hill and Mrs. L. Low. Mrs. S. K. Hayward, regent, was chosen to represent the chapter at the provincial annual meeting to be held this spring in Vancouver.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Teen Impressed By Married Man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a very mature 17-year-old girl, and I like a man who is 31. He has been married for eight years, but for six years he and his wife have had an understanding, and they do as they please with no questions asked. He is a very nice person and he respects me.

I would like to talk to my mother about him, but I am sure she wouldn't understand. To me, age doesn't matter as long as we feel the same about each other. Whenever he is around, I get butterflies in my stomach. Can you advise me?

BUTTERFLIES

DEAR BUTTERFLIES: What may feel like "butterflies" in your stomach could be bats in your belfry. I can't imagine bigger trouble for a 17-year-old girl than an involvement with a 31-year-old married man who has an "understanding" with his wife. He's not as "nice" as you think he is. Lose him.

DEAR ABBY: Do you think there is any harm in women wrestling with each other in the privacy of a home if they are related or good friends?

My husband does.

My mother lives with us and we three get along just fine. The other night my husband was asleep on the sofa and my mother and I were sitting on her bed, just talking. We were kidding around and started a playful pillow fight. It finally developed into a wrestling match. We got to laughing and screaming, and the noise woke my husband.

He was very mad at us and said two grown women should not be wrestling with each other. I honestly can't see anything wrong with it, can you?

DARLENE

DEAR DARLENE: Not as long as you hold the noise down.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's daughter by a former marriage is being married soon and she has asked her father to give her away. He accepted and seems honored and delighted. It's going to be one of those big formal church weddings. (Of course, I'm not going.)

I realize that as her father he has certain obligations, but if he is asked to pose in a picture with his ex-wife, I think he should refuse, don't you?

Their marriage ended five years ago, and both he and his ex have remarried, so why try to re-create something which no longer exists?

SECOND

DEAR SECOND WIFE: On the occasion of a child's wedding, I think divorced parents should do all they can to make that day as happy for their child as possible. If I were you, I certainly would not concern myself with whether or not my husband poses for a picture with his "ex."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Here is another letter from a reader:

"Dear Mrs. Lowman,

"Won't you please spend some more time on hair in your column? It is really one of woman's problems, especially for older people with thin hair. I teach school and like to look nice but my hair is troublesome. I have only a few grey hairs but I have difficulty with rinses. When I rinse with light brown my hair gets too dark and gives me a hard look. Light ash blonde reddens my hair. Please advise about hair. There is as much demand for nice hair as there is for diets."

Lowman

I agree that hair and its arrangement can make a great difference in a woman's appearance. Very fine hair or thinning hair does present problems. In both instances a good body permanent is a lifesaver. Fine hair must be handled carefully or it will break or frizz.

There are so many excellent rinses on the market. There are those which last through several shampoos and others which are temporary and must be repeated with each shampoo. Of course brands differ. Some are better than others and the colors vary with each brand.

With only a few grey hairs I suggest that you try one of the temporary rinses. This is all the coverage you require and you can experiment with colors to your heart's content. You can try a new one every shampoo.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"My fourth grade teacher told me I must apply myself, but I kept forgetting . . . I guess I'll put that down for next Saturday afternoon."

Anything Possible With Little Try

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Chris Asmar is a young man who thinks nothing is impossible.

A Grade 11 student at F. J. Brennan secondary school here, Chris gate-crashed Senator Edward Kennedy's appearance Tuesday at the Detroit Economic Club luncheon, and left with autographs, pictures, a tape recording—and no questions from the secret service.

When he read the senator would be in Detroit Tuesday, he arranged for time off school, took a camera and a tape recorder "so I looked like the press," and arrived at the club luncheon before the Senator.

When the senator arrived and joined the receiving line, Chris went through the line. He wanted to get a message from the senator on his tape recorder then, but the secret service held him back.

He had no luncheon ticket, so he got a chair from the kitchen, and sat in front of television cameras near the podium.

During the dinner, "I kept bugging him for autographs," said Chris.

He also persuaded a woman to take his picture with the senator.

Still nobody checked who he was, although "I had a few suspicious looks."

As Senator Kennedy spoke, Chris got most of it on tape. "I had the best seat in the place," he said.

When the senator left, Chris went after him. As Mr. Kennedy sat in his car, Chris "just crammed my way through" the secret service and asked the senator for a message to the students at F. J. Brennan.

"Well I'm glad to see you, F. J.," said the senator, thinking Chris himself was F. J. Brennan.

When they straightened that out, Mr. Kennedy said he wished he had time to go over and pay his respects to the students.

Chris went away happy.

Air Canada Negotiations Break Down

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations between Air Canada and the union representing its 6,200 mechanics and maintenance workers broke down Wednesday.

Michael Pitchford, chairman of the negotiation committee of the International Association of Machinists, said in an interview that Air Canada Tuesday had offered less than it had in January of this year.

Air Canada Tuesday offered an increase of seven per cent for the first year and six per cent for the second year of a two-year contract, he said.

The union is holding out for a 20-per-cent increase over a one-year period.

The airline in January offered eight per cent for the first year and six per cent for the second year of a two-year contract.

New Japanese Link

TOKYO (Reuters) — A submarine cable across the Japan Sea was completed Wednesday to form the first trans-Siberian telecommunication line between Japan and Europe. The new link will reduce by two-thirds the time required for telephone connections between Europe and Japan.

Doctors' Beating Kept Man Alive

LONDON (CP) — Canadian-born Allan Draper took such a pummelling from the doctors that they broke seven of his ribs in a struggle to keep him alive.

Now recovered and campaigning against the "stigma" of heart cases, Draper, 46, was a victim of coronary thrombosis five years ago. For 150 minutes doctors and nurses struggled to revive him as his heart stopped and started like a broken clock.

They massaged his chest, hit it with their fists and finally placed him on the floor and pounded his chest with their stockinged feet. That was when his ribs began cracking.

Later they strapped an electric shock pad to his chest, switched on the current, and he bucked and bounced on the floor "like a great fish out of water."

REFUSED TO QUIT

The story, which fortunately for Draper had a happy ending, was told by W. A. E. Jones, a journalist who has also suffered a heart attack. It was published by The Evening News of London which described the survival struggle as "fantastic."

For 10 days Draper, a Torontonian who came to England as a wartime soldier and later settled here, hovered between life and death. His English wife who sat by his bed was told there was no hope.

But Draper, showing great discipline and determination, gradually got back on his feet. That was only the beginning. For two years he had to watch every step. He could not work and he discovered what happens to the "scrapheap of heart cases." His job folded. His savings ran out. Friends turned their backs on him.

Draper struggled on. Father of two children, he started to read about the insurance business. The Drapers turned the living room in their home in Horley, Surrey, into an insurance broker's office. Gradually his business began to prosper.

Now the doctor has told him his heart has recovered. He drives a car, goes to the golf club and has a drink with his friends.

"Life is starting all over again," he said. "I just want to be treated like a normal man and given the same chance. There is a stigma about coronary thrombosis which must be swept away."

Violent Robber Gets Five Years

CHEMAINUS — A former bartender who asked the court to "consider my wife" and asked for forgiveness, was sentenced Wednesday to five years for robbery with violence of his former employer.

David Victor Sell, 23, of Chemainus was told by Magistrate Lance Heard that in view of "the premeditated aspect of this robbery" he was forced to send him to the penitentiary in New Westminster for five years.

"I am concerned with the fact that we must protect the public and provide a deterrent to this type of crime. It is only by a stroke of luck that you are not before me now on a murder charge."

The victim, Austin Kennedy, was brutally beaten and robbed March 15 in the Green Lantern Hotel while carrying $1,300 in cash in a satchel to his suite.

Unconscious for several days he was removed from hospital here to St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria. While returning from hospital March 28 he was involved in a one-vehicle accident near the Malahat summit and died of injuries Sunday night.

A viewing was held in Duncan Wednesday night. The driver of the car, David Pedersen of Crofton, suffered only minor injuries. An inquest was ordered but no date set.

Hydrofoil's First Run Pleases Navy

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Navy's only sea-going hydrofoil, HMCS Bras d'Or, underwent her first foil tests Wednesday in waters off Halifax Harbor.

Lt.-Cmdr. Jean Bonneau, a Canadian forces information officer, said the 150-foot craft was up on her foils three times during the trials for periods ranging from 10 minutes to a half-hour.

He said the ship's commanding officer, Cmdr. Constantine Cotaras of Vancouver, was satisfied with the trials.

The craft has an estimated top speed of 65 knots, but speeds attained during the foil trials were not made public.

The Bras d'Or is equipped with anti-submarine weapons and is computerized to aid in detecting submarines.

Lt.-Cmdr. Bonneau said the whole series of tests and trials for the 250-ton ship is expected to last one to two years.

Powered by a 30,000-horsepower aircraft gas turbine, the $50,000,000 vessel was built in Sorel, Que., and was commissioned in 1968.

Commons Blow Hot Over West

OTTAWA (CP)—If, as some people claim, Ottawa is ignoring Western Canada, you would never know it from the daily proceedings of Parliament.

Some days, it seems, there is enough high-powered parliamentary oratory on western problems to dry all the damp grain on the prairies. And seldom a day goes by without some reference to western farmers.

When he was running for the presidency of the Progressive Conservative Party last month, Dr. Lewis Brand of Saskatoon told a news conference here that western discontent was growing at an unprecedented rate.

If Quebec ever left Confederation, he said, he was confident that between 75 and 80 per cent of the people in the West would favor forming a separate state of their own.

HITS TIMING

While western farmers were experiencing great economic difficulties, he said, the government was offering only an official languages bill. "What kind of time is this to offer that?"

Since then, others have complained that western problems are not being dealt with in Ottawa. If this is true, nobody can blame the Commons.

A study of Hansard—the official report of parliamentary proceedings—shows that between last Sept. 12, when this session began, and Feb. 28, the western grain situation was discussed 695 times.

By comparison, Hansard indicates that the subject of the Atlantic provinces, with their traditional economic problems, was raised only 48 times.

These comparisons are not completely accurate, since Atlantic problems were obviously also discussed under such headings as regional development, fisheries and ferries.

Fisheries, which applies to both coasts, was raised 337 times.

FARM TOPICS LEAD

But regardless of how the count is made, western agriculture problems are far ahead of any other single subject.

In addition to the 695 references to grain, there are hundreds of other entries under such headings in the Hansard index as: Prairie farm assistance, prairie farm rehabilitation, prairie grain advance payments, pest control, farm improvement loans, farm income, farm labor, farm machinery, farmers and farms. Farm credit had 315 entries.

Another comparison is that this period also covered the critical stage of the Nigerian-Biafran conflict. It was referred to 413 times.

Far down the list was bilingualism, discussed only 28 times. The official languages bill was referred to 48 times. Under the heading of poverty there were 41 entries, and lumber drew only five references.

Mid-North Meet's Aim

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — A conference will be held at Lakehead University Aug. 18-22 to examine the advisability of establishing a nation-wide policy and plan for the development of Canada's mid-north.

In giving the dates to the third Northern Resources Conference, Richard Rohmer, a Toronto lawyer involved in land development who will be the conference chairman, said delegates will consider the problems and challenges related to the urbanization, industrialization and creation of a policy and plan for the mid-north.

B.C. Teachers Oppose Finance Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's 20,000 school teachers are to continue active opposition to the province's new education finance formula.

Delegates to the B.C. Teachers Federation annual convention here Wednesday voted unanimously to oppose any legislation which requires school boards to seek approval from municipal councils, or from ratepayers through a referendum, of any portion of their operating budgets.

The delegates also voted to oppose any legislation which depends exclusively on the average dollar expenditure throughout the province as a factor for calculating of grants to school boards.

Teachers in any school district will receive moral and financial support if they walk off the job in protest of budgetary cutbacks, the delegates decided when they approved a resolution to this effect.

The resolution amends an earlier one which called for financial assistance for 132 Kitimat teachers who may stage a walkout June 15 if operating budgets are not increased.

REJECTED BID

Ratepayers in seven school districts, including Kitimat, recently turned down referendums for increased operating expenses.

William Hunter, chairman of the BCTF's education finance committee, told the convention that the committee had worked actively to get changes in the new finance formula, and would continue to do so.

Mr. Hunter said the committee was not only concerned with the districts which had to hold referendums but also with many other districts which may have had to cut back on essentials.

He said one of the major inadequacies of the new finance formula was the attempt to base everything on a province-wide average.

"There is no such thing as an "average school" in B.C.—there's too much diversity in this province for that," he said.

Consistory Date Set

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The consistory at which Pope Paul will create 33 cardinals, one from Canada, will be held April 28 in the consistorial hall, the Vatican announced Wednesday.

One of the 33 will be Msgr. George Bernard Flahiff, archbishop of Winnipeg.

Arson Suspected

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Fire caused about $100,000 damage to the four-room Atchelitz Elementary School Wednesday. School board officials were attempting to find facilities to handle the school's 121 students. Arson is suspected.

B.C. TEACHERS NAME HEAD

VANCOUVER (CP)—James Killeen, 35, vice-principal of Vancouver's John Oliver Secondary School, on Wednesday was elected president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation.

Les Isaacson, principal of the George Jay Elementary School in Victoria, and Louis Beduz, a Comox principal, were elected members-at-large.

Montreal Dock Men Sign 3-Year Pact

MONTREAL (CP) — Longshoremen in Montreal, Trois-Rivieres and Quebec City Wednesday accepted a new three-year contract with the Shipping Federation of Canada, heralding what Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey called "the dawn of a new era."

About 4,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association voted overwhelming approval of the agreement, which provides them with a 37-hour work week and average wage increases of 84 cents an hour.

Average hourly rate in the third year will be $4.60.

Labor strife on the docks in recent years led to threats from shippers that they might be forced to find alternate transportation routes, bypassing Montreal where 2,200 longshoremen are employed.

The new contract, effective Sunday, also provides for additional pension benefits and greater job security.

ESTABLISH A FUND

The union agreed that no restrictions would be placed on container cargo handling and in return the shippers said they would establish a "technological displacement fund" to protect longshoremen against innovations in cargo handling.

Brian Mulroney, counsel for the shipping federation, said the port of Montreal might attract new business as a result of the flexibility of container clauses.

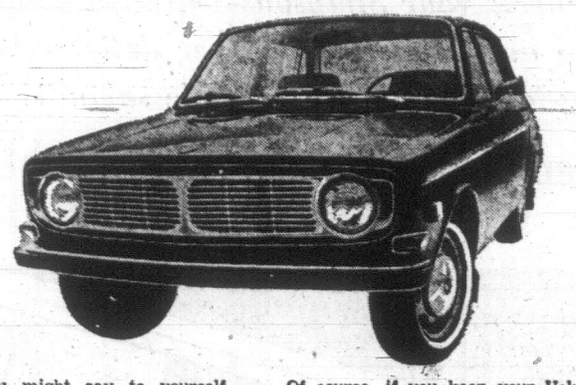
Montreal is the first port on the eastern seaboard in which the ILA has agreed not to restrict containerization.

Had agreement not been reached, a strike at the three ports would have been legal seven days after a conciliation board report was submitted to Mr. Mackasey.

Defector Shot

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin police reported Wednesday night that East German border guards shot a man who tried to climb a barbed wire fence into West Berlin near Tempelhof airfield. He was taken out off the wire and driven off in an East German Red Cross truck.

Buy a Volvo, keep it a long time, and get out from under car payments for a change.



Of course, if you had bought a Volvo two or three years ago, you'd have something today.

You'd have a two or three-year-old Volvo.

Which isn't bad to have. Because where three years is the beginning of the end for some cars, it's only the beginning for a Volvo.

Volvos aren't built to wear out on a three-year plan. Volvos are built to last eleven years in Sweden where it's tough being a car.

Now you might say to yourself, "If I kept a car 11 years I'd get sick and tired of driving it." You won't.

Driving a Volvo is a pleasure. It handles more like a sports car than a roomy family sedan. And unlike a sports car, Volvo comes equipped with 7-way adjustable bucket seats, rear-window defroster, thermostatically controlled heating system and other such niceties.

Of course, if you keep your Volvo 11 years, what you might get sick and tired of is looking at it.

In that case, you can always afford to take a trip away from it. Using the money you've saved by not making car payments.

When you get back, it'll start looking good again.

Students Serenade Queen Juliana

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP) — Queen Juliana of The Netherlands was serenaded and applauded at the Ecole de Musique Vincent d'Indy Wednesday when she toured the school where her daughter, Princess Christina, has been studying voice since last October.

The 60-year-old monarch arrived from Amsterdam Monday for a 10-day private visit with her youngest daughter.

At the suburban Outremont school she was greeted at the entrance by the director, Sister Stella Plante, who presented her with a bouquet of spring flowers.

For the next hour the Queen was taken on a whirlwind tour.

"This is where I practice," said Christina, pulling her mother into a small room.

The 22-year-old princess flushed slightly as she ran her fingers quickly over a piano keyboard.

"Well, are you going to play something for me?" asked her mother in Dutch.

The princess laughed but refused as several reporters and photographers milled about outside.

The Queen, an arm around her daughter, was whisked by elevator to the eighth floor and into a recording room where Montreal student Marie Laferriere, 19, was receiving a singing lesson from Bernard Diamont, voice instructor to the princess.

The Queen sat down at a student's desk beside her daughter and listened.

When the royal couple approached another room where a theory lesson was in progress, the students rose and applauded.

The queen also listened as Louise Beaudoin, 25, of Sherbrooke, Que., sang the stirring Air de Salome in French from the opera by Massinet.

When it was over the queen burst into applause and told the young artist how much she had enjoyed listening to her.

The tour ended with a visit to the grand concert hall of the school where student Andre Laplante of Montreal, a first-prize winner of the Quebec Music Festival last year, played a piano piece for her.

During her visit in Montreal the Queen will remain with "friends" while her daughter continues to live at the school.

Further plans for the royal couple were not divulged and the balance of the visit was to be private.

Hawes Seeks Apartments

Oak Bay is caught in an economic squeeze that demands the systematic growth of apartment buildings, says Mayor Fred Hawes.

"In the last five-year period, net school costs have increased 76 per cent and the cost of general purpose projects and debt payments have risen by 42 per cent.

"As long as this inflationary situation exists we can expect an 8 to 10 per cent increase in costs annually."

The mayor, speaking on the two bylaws which will be aired at a public hearing at Oak Bay Junior High School 7:30 tonight, said that Oak Bay residents must be prepared to "make some sacrifices" if they are to avoid excessive taxation.

EIGHT MORE MILLS

"The bylaw which would zone the former riding academy site for apartments is part of a program proposed by the Capital Region Planning Board in 1967. This January, council agreed on the erection of 400 apartment suites each year for the next three years."

Mayor Hawes estimates that eight mills may have to be added to the tax load unless council continues its policy of getting the maximum land revenue from apartments in carefully-chosen areas.

"The cost of sanitary services, outfall extensions, extended-care hospitals and the fall referendum for acute hospital beds will all add an appreciable load to the taxpayer."

He defends the proposed building of two nine-storey apartment buildings on the academy site.

SHOPPING COMPLEX

"Our tax department estimates that a class A construction building will produce an annual revenue of $400 per suite while three-storey frame constructions will yield $200 a year."

The mayor also replied to objections voiced by village merchants and members of the Oak Bay Board of Trade to the second bylaw to be aired tonight, which could pave the way for a $1 million shopping complex opposite the city commercial centre on Foul Bay. The merchants fear the complex will jeopardize their businesses.

The mayor sees little risk of loss of revenue. "People will shop in the stores they know. Also, our policy includes apartment building close to the present shopping centres, including the village. By the end of the year there will be 250 suites finished or under construction near the village."

We're Here, Sincere Says Kaiser Coal Firm

A Kaiser Coal Ltd. consultant Wednesday told the Victoria branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association of his company's sincerity in B.C. resource development.

Earl L. Reynolds said in interview his purpose was to show "why we're here and that we're sincere."

He showed a film on methods used to redlaim land which had been surface-mined.

The company has come under fire since signing a 15-year, multi-million-dollar contract to deliver 45 million long tons of B.C. coal to Japan.

It plans to strip-mine the coal from the former Crowsnest holdings in the Kootenay.

The coal contract prompted construction of the Roberts Bank superport and a special rail line to carry coal trains from the interior to tidewater.

PROTEST KAISER

The company's strip-mining plans also raised a cry among conservationists, who said the surface-mining methods will destroy valuable provincial land.

That outcry prompted the B.C. legislature this last session to pass extensive revisions of the Coal Mines Act and a new Mining Regulations Act that will require strip-miners to repair damaged land.

FILM HERE TO SHOW AUSTRALIAN WILDLIFE

A film dealing with Australian wildlife will be presented by a noted Anzac naturalist Friday and Saturday at the Newcombe auditorium in the provincial museum.

The show, sponsored by the Victoria Natural History Society, will feature the film Wanderings of a Naturalist in the Australian Bush and its producer, Harold J. Pollock.

The show will start at 8 on both nights. There will also be a matinee Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Pollock is one of Australia's top wildlife film producers.

He has been, in turn, an insurance inspector, author and school teacher.

Runners Face Tough Terrain

A tough cross-country course in Central Saanich may be selected for a major Canadian university race this fall.

Organizers of the Western Inter-Collegiate Cross Country Championship, to be held on Vancouver Island this fall, are considering a five-mile route used by Greater Victoria students this spring.

MANY OBSTACLES

The course was mapped out by Basil Parker, 59-year-old Glenlyon school teacher, who for two successive years has organized a cross-country race for young people, and grown-ups.

This year in March, more than 350 runners between the ages of 9 and 33 took part in the event.

University of Victoria officials, who are organizing the big race involving six western Canadian universities, are impressed with the course.

The course is just what cross-country runners like. It's tough with plenty of obstacles, streams to wade through, ditches to jump and sloughs to cross.

The course starts from Centennial Park on Wallace Drive and ends at the Saanichton Fair grounds.

Bob Bell, director of athletics at the university, said cross-country runners don't like racing on roads.

"This one seems to have a little road work," he said. It takes in fields and woods."

Because the route runs through private property and the Brentwood Indian Reserve, permission to trespass will be necessary.

Competing in the race will be teams from the universities of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Calgary, British Columbia and Victoria.

Teams will comprise between five and seven members.

The University of Simon Fraser will not be represented because it does not belong to the Inter-Collegiate Union.

TOKYO (AP) — Twenty thousand members of the Japan Seamen's Union manning ships servicing Japan's domestic ports struck today after negotiations for higher wages broke down. The union demanded an 8,000 yen ($22.22) increase in monthly pay; management countered with an offer of 6,000 yen ($16.67).

Head Transplants 'Relatively Easy'

TORONTO (CP) — Surgeons now can transplant hearts or kidneys and even make temporary substitute hearts out of plastic.

Next it could be head transplants, says a Toronto professor.

"Brain transplants have been ruled out as far beyond our present technical skills but transplants of the whole head are a much simpler procedure," says Prof. George Lewis of the University of Toronto's anatomy department.

"Indeed, the problem of transplanting a head could be solved before the end of the century."

In actual fact, such a procedure would be transplanting a body to a head, rather than vice-versa, since it is the brain that determines identity.

"And this will enable us to achieve a really startling kind of man-made immortality," says Prof. Lewis.

He says the crucial problem is the one all transplants face—rejection.

"Medical science will overcome this."

BODY FUNCTIONS LOST

Surgeons now have the skill to transplant a head, he says, but not with complete restoration of body functions. The transplanted head would stay alive but the body would be useless.

"In Russia they've transplanted extra heads on dogs. The transplanted head has full visceral functions, breathing and eating, but no nervous connections with the body."

If the only object were to keep the head alive it probably could be managed with no body at all, says Prof. Lewis.

"I wouldn't be surprised if a disembodied head could be kept alive by means of a mechanical life system, hooking it up to a glorified heart and lung machine."

Prof. Lewis explains how a human head transplant could be performed.

"In the first place, the whole procedure would be mapped out in advance with meticulous care. . . .

"Since you have to maintain visceral functions, breathing and eating, you probably would make your frontal incision at the lower limit of the throat, just above the collar button. That would preserve the highly specialized musculature of the larynx and save a lot of trouble connecting loose ends.

"At the back you would cut much higher up, say at cervicle three. That should give a nice, neat cut."

HOME GARDEN

Nip Fading Daffodils

By HILDA BEASTALL

Ninety-nine gardens out of every 100 in and around Victoria have a few daffodils blooming just now. They continue to do so even though little or no care is given at any time. The most ordinary kinds can be improved if flower heads are nipped off just as the flowers fade.

Hilda

Take off the green seed pod just behind the flower head and the flower itself, leaving the stem.

Where plantings or small groups of nammed varieties are grown, it is a good plan to add a little fertilizer as well.

It can be a general garden fertilizer or a bulb (or potato) fertilizer. Scatter it on the soil at the approximate rate of one level tablespoon to a group of three or five bulbs. Water gently to dissolve the powder and water once again thoroughly before the leaves begin to fade.

Daffodil is a word dear to most of us from childhood, but it really applies only to the long trumpeted kinds. The whole genus is called narcissus, so when we read of care for narcissi it refers to the whole clan including daffodils.

Between the time of blooms fading and leaves becoming limp and yellow is the critical period when the flowers for next year are formed within the narcissus bulbs.

This is why it makes sense for us to care for the bulbs with food and water in late spring of this year.

Once the leaves are limp and are become yellowed they no longer work at building the bulb and flowers within. They may then be cut off (not pulled) or if the bulbs are in grass, the area may be mowed.

Until about the middle of June the grass must be allowed to grow, without watering after mid-May, to allow the leaves to die down naturally.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Grant Kremshagen, age 11, of Edmonton, Alberta, for his question:

What is a glass snake?

There are all sorts of so-called glass snakes in Europe and Asia, Africa and the Americas. They are not often seen because they prefer to hide by day and do their foraging for food after sundown. Many of them live in burrows a few inches underground and rarely come to the surface. There are lots of them around the southern parts of North America and more of them in Central and South America. But all of these so-called glass snakes are actually legless lizards.

The eyes of a true snake are covered with fixed eyelids like transparent window panes. But a glass snake has eyelids of skin and you can watch him blink. He has a scaly, lizard-type skin and an amazing feature that snakes do not have. Being a lizard, he has the ability to regenerate or re-grow a lost portion of his tail. This gift comes in very handy when the tail of a lizard is grabbed by a hungry enemy. The tail breaks off and the lizard scuttles away to freedom. In time, his body grows a new tail to replace the old one.

A glass snake lizard makes the very best use of this regeneration talent. At the slightest touch, his tail breaks off and, of all things, it continues to wriggle. His hungry enemy mistakes it for the real thing and fails to notice the legless lizard snaking his way to safety. Some observers claim that the glass snake can break his tail off into several pieces—and leave them behind to confound his enemies.

Feeds on Bugs

This tail-breaking trick is amazing to watch because the snaky body may separate almost in half — and the tail portion left behind is larger than the living portion that escapes. This is because the tail of this legless lizard is twice the length of his head and body. The three-foot-long glass snake of North America has a head and body measuring 12 inches, plus a 24-inch tail. No great harm is done when the tail breaks off in one or several pieces. A wad of strong muscles close the wound shut and stop the escape of blood. A new tail soon begins to sprout, though it will never grow quite as long as the original one.

Glass snake lizards are harmless fellows who dine on grubs and snails, bugs and caterpillars. The giant of the family lives in China. He is four feet long and he feeds on more sizeable morsels, including mice and other lizards. All these legless lizards are very fast and spry, and all of them lay eggs. In some species, the mothers stand guard over their eggs until they hatch. The nests may be in hollow logs, in piles of fallen leaves or in burrows below ground.

For a person who likes the cold-blooded reptiles, a glass snake makes a fine pet. He needs a house large enough to move comfortably around. It should have a very deep earthy floor, plenty of moisture and ferny foliage. As a rule, he thrives on a diet of freshly caught earthworms, bugs and grubs. Like most reptiles, he does not respond with much friendly affection. And, of course, he must be handled with extra special tender care. When he feels a rough touch, the legless lizard is all set to shed his tail — and if he does that, you have lost most of your pet, at least temporarily.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Victoria Keel, age 9, of Berea, Ohio, for her question:

What causes knots in wood?

The kind of wood that is marked with knots is cut from evergreen trees. Pine trees and Christmas trees and other cone-bearing trees are stuffed with gummy resins. The also tend to grow thick, straight trunks with lots of smallish side branches. When they are small, many of them look like Christmas trees with pointed tops and wider branches right down to the ground. When they get to be tall trees, the lower branches have disappeared. But the tree trunk grows taller only at the top. So it does not lift up the lower branches as it grows. What happens explains how the knots are caused in the wood.

When a pine tree reaches the teen-age stage of life, it begins to drop its lower branches one by one. As a branch falls, the gummy resin in the woody cells seals up the wound with a hard, darker-colored scar. The trunk grows thicker by adding new rings of new wood around its outer edge. As time goes on, the hard old scars from the fallen lower branches are buried inside the trunk. When the trunk is sawed into boards of lumber, the scars are revealed as decorative knots in the wood.

A Phone For Hung-Up Teen-Agers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Youngsters with a hangup, be it sex or studies, pick up the telephone in Los Angeles and talk it out with adults — expert, sympathetic and anonymous.

The kids' private listening service is a surprising success. Hot line has received an estimated 5,000 calls — an average of 18 to 20 a day — from boys and girls anxious to talk directly — and anonymously — with an adult about intimate problems.

"Many parents and adults generally think their kids simply do not want to communicate," says Dr. Dale Garrell, director of the sponsoring Children's Hospital Adolescent Unit. "Certainly this is not the case if the conditions, the atmosphere, are right."

Of the first 1,000 calls, about 20 per cent concerned boy-girl relationships, 17 per cent conflicts with parents and seven per cent had to do with drugs.

The staff of 30 listeners on hot line include graduate students, psychologists, doctors, lawyers and social workers — all screened and modestly paid. Other professional specialists in major fields are available.

Gerald Bissiri, a staff psychologist on the project, thinks availability is the key.

"When young people need someone, they need them now," he says. "Tomorrow may be too late."

The callers are mostly girls. But none hangs up before he gets the problem off his chest.

Glue Lures Grubs To Doom

CHRISTCHURCH (CP) —The female of the species is not the big attraction to New Zealand grass grubs. They are being attracted to their doom by a more potent lure.

Scientists have made a breakthrough against the grass grub, a pest which costs New Zealand $60,000,000 a year, by sheer chance.

Seeking a way to attract grubs in large numbers so that they could be easily killed, scientists gathered virgin female grubs and attached their dead bodies to the leaves of a tree.

Male grubs assembled in gratifying numbers. But further study showed it was not the females they were interested in. The big attraction was the adhesive with which the bodies of the females had been stuck to the leaves.

The scientists now have an effective method of attracting the male grubs for mass eradication.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

String of Hardships Faced Barr Settlers

By BOB BOWMAN

One of Canada's most progressive and prosperous cities is Lloydminster on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border. Its founders would be proud if they could see the result of the hardships they endured. They came from Britain in 1903 during the successful immigration drive organized by Sir Clifford Sifton, minister of the interior.

Bowman

Sifton had agents operating in many parts of the world, and they earned $5 for every head of family, and $2 for every other individual they persuaded to settle in Canada. One of the agents was Rev. I. M. Barr, a silver-tongued orator in England.

His largest group was known as "the Barr settlers" and it arrived in Saint John, N.B., on April 10, 1903, after a dreadful Atlantic crossing. The ship was an old tub named Manitoba, and men, women and children had to sleep in cargo holds. They had no privacy, even in toilet arrangements, and the food and water was not fit to eat or drink.

After arriving in Saint John they were carried across Canada in "colonist" railway cars, and their baggage was lost on the way. The train went so slowly that the people in the front coaches claimed they could jump off, shoot rabbits, and still have time to board one of the rear coaches.

When the Barr settlers arrived at Saskatoon they had to live in tents for two weeks until their luggage was found. Then they travelled to their destination in overloaded wagons. Baggage dropped into mudholes and coal oil spilled into the food. The temperature was often below zero and made colder by blizzards blowing across the prairies.

The Barr settlers were city-folk, and not accustomed to such rough living. Some of them were tempted to turn back, but Rev. G. E. Lloyd was a tower of strength and always managed to encourage them to continue.

There were many hardships for years after they began their settlement which was called Lloydminster in honor of the man who played such a big part in the hour of need.

Other events April 10:

1606 — King James I granted land in Canada to Plymouth and London Companies.

1684 — France prohibited Canadians from emigrating to English colonies to the south.

1812 — U.S.A. called out militia for war against Canada.

1841 — Halifax received city charter.

1865 — Dr. Charles Tupper, Premier of Nova Scotia, proposed Maritime union rather than Confederation.

1912 — Board of Grain Commissioners appointed.

1937 — Parliament passed act organizing Tran-Canada Airlines.

1959 — Nuclear research station opened at McMaster University.

Nishga Claim Judgment Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP)—Mr. Justice J. G. Gould reserved decision Wednesday in the Nishga Indian demand for recognition of their tribal land rights on the north coast of British Columbia as a week-long hearing ended in B.C. Supreme Court here.

Mr. Justice Gould said he would have to deliberate on what he termed "a troublesome case."

Nearly 100 Nishgas have attended the hearing to seek a declaration that they still own land in the Nass River Valley area north of Prince Rupert.

In submissions Wednesday, lawyer Tom Berger, acting for the Indians, told Mr. Justice Gould that the Nishgas were not asking for compensation.

Mr. Berger said all that was being sought in the hearing was a declaration as to whether the Nishgas' ancient rights of title have been extinguished by the white man.

Vancouver lawyer Douglas McK. Brown, appearing for the B.C. attorney-general, said the Nishgas were making their claim in the wrong court and suggested they should take the matter to Ottawa.

Mr. Brown said the land title was taken over by the Crown in 1858 when British Columbia was proclaimed a British colony.

Uvic Senate Agrees to Five Changes

Questions of ombudsmen and student representation took up much of the time of the University of Victoria senate meeting Wednesday.

The senate took a close look at some recommendations contained in a sub-committee report, but adjourned after amending and approving only five out of a total of 15 recommendations.

The proposed establishment of an ombudsman to arbitrate problems that arise between students and individual faculty members was rejected in the sub-committee report.

OTHER GROUPS

It recommended instead that a student could take his grievance or problem up with any one of nine other groups or individuals already in existence at the university, including the dean of college and students affairs, department heads and deans, student representatives, other faculty members, the counselling service or the president.

Student president Norm Wright who was present at the meeting as a guest said the recommended procedures "did not respond to the situation here," referring to a recent disagreement that arose in the faculty of education between students and a faculty member with whose teaching methods they disagreed.

He said an ombudsman is an official with "investigative and remedial" powers, but the senators disagreed an ombudsman had the power to overrule previous decisions.

Moving on to the question of students representation, the senate decided to issue a directive to all departments that steps be taken to ensure that representative students take part in meetings of the department, with or without voting power.

Departments concerned will have six alternative methods in which to implement student representation.

The senate also decided students "have the right upon request" to be represented on department committees concerned with curriculum changes.

Clothing, Housing Prices Help Boost Living Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher clothing, transportation and housing costs pushed the consumer price index up to 123.2 in March from 122.6 in February, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

It was the first movement in the index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, since January.

Price levels of food and of health and personal care both decreased slightly.

The index a year ago was 118.6 and this year's March figure represents a 3.9-per-cent increase over it.

The bureau said higher quotations for new lines of spring clothing, combined with the removal of mid-winter sales prices, helped boost the clothing index by 1.6 per cent.

The transportation component advanced slightly less than that, due largely to auto licences and repair charges. Increased home ownership costs were responsible for the rise in the housing component of the index.

The recreation and reading index was the only other main component to register an increase.

The dip in the food index, to 123.8 from 123.9 in February, was due to lower meat, dairy products and egg prices outweighing increases for fresh fruits and vegetables.

Meat "specials" lowered the prices of beef steaks, ham and bacon but chicken prices rose in a number of centres. In Toronto and some other eastern cities, increases of 50 per cent and more since the previous month were recorded in the retail prices of lettuce, reflecting almost a doubling of prices at wholesale.

Other notable but lesser increases were recorded for tomatoes, apples and canned and frozen orange juice. Bread and sugar prices rose, while milk, butter and margarine declined slightly.

FORCE INDEX UP

The housing index rose to 122.8 in March from 122.3 under the impact of higher rents, higher prices for new houses and repairs, and higher property taxes.

The clothing index advanced to 123.8 from 121.8, and the transportation index to 118.3 from 117.3, while the health and personal care index dropped to 129.5 from 129.6.

There is no directly comparable index of family incomes.

This index, based on 1961 equalling 100, increased in January, the latest month available, to 146 from 140.5 in December. In January, 1968, the index was 135.6.

The consumer price index is based in most categories on prices in early March. It is a sampling of prices for more than 300 goods and services purchased by a family of two to six persons, living in cities of over 30,000, and having an annual income which in 1957 ranged from $2,500 to $7,000.

POSTAL BANK TO CLOSE

Canada's post office savings bank is to be discontinued at the end of 1969.

Depositors are urged to close out their accounts as soon as possible.

"The post office savings bank is being discontinued because of the steadily declining number of accounts," postal officer Gustav Arndt said Wednesday.

"Not many people were interested in this service, and we had so many dead accounts the post office was actually losing money.

"Over the years, more and more people were dealing with banks. The savings bank has simply become obsolete."

Arndt said, although this type of service is quite popular in England, a surprisingly small number of English people make use of it here.

"We have only a few active accounts left. The service was more popular in country areas where there was no bank."

All accounts were handled from Ottawa. Any deposits unclaimed by Dec. 31 will go into a trust account, where they stay for up to 30 years.

"After that, the money will go to the federal treasury," Arndt said.

SHORT AND SNAPPY APPEAL DRIVE PLANNED

This year's United Red Feather campaign will not drag on for months, says campaign chairman Peter Darling. He has set a target for a "short, snappy" campaign, starting the first week in September and ending in late October.

Darling, head of the computer centre at the University of Victoria, was last year's vice-chairman, being recruited as 1969 chairman earlier this year.

He says special efforts will be made to wrap the campaign up by the end of October. Goal will be set in June.

"The public doesn't then have time to get tired of it. We need enthusiasm from canvassers and the public."

Last year's campaign ran into December.

Parole Saves Tax Cash Says Board Chairman

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — More and more authorities agree with George Street's contention that parole is not only more effective but cheaper than imprisonment.

Mr. Street, 53, a former military officer and juvenile court judge, has been reappointed to a second 10-year term as chairman of the national parole board.

The reappointment by a Liberal government is a tribute since Mr. Street was appointed by a Conservative government when the board was formed in 1959.

The chairman's arguments for more funds to increase the capacity for parole have won support not only from Conservatives and New Democrats but from Solicitor-General George McIlraith.

Mr. McIlraith, speaking to the Commons standing committee on justice and legal affairs, said a survey of 2,284 parolees last June found they were earning a total of $673,371 a month.

He compared this pointedly with the $4,900 to $5,500 annual operating cost of keeping one man in prison.

TOUGH ON REPEATERS

Mr. Street also impressed this argument upon the committee.

"We spend $65,000,000 a year to keep 7,000 prisoners locked up," he testified.

"But the parole board has to conduct a parole service not just for those 7,000 prisoners in federal prisons, but for 12,000 prisoners in provincial prisons, deal with 12,000 applications a year, grant somewhere around 3,500 to 4,000 paroles a year and maintain 2,700 people on parole at all times, all on a budget of only about $2,000,000."

The firm, magisterial Mr. Street is no softie. While he asserts often that too many men are imprisoned in Canada, he also contends that regular repeaters should be given indeterminate sentences to bring them into line.

This hard-headed stance has built confidence in the parole system despite some mistakes —among them Leopold Dion, a rapist who while on parole after a long prison term strangled four boys in Quebec City.

UNDER CLOSE WATCH

Since then, the board's analysts have given careful scrutiny to violent offenders before allowing them parole. The board also has required a psychiatric evaluation of them and kept a tighter rein once they are on parole.

Parole extends for the length of a sentence. If a man has served three years of a five-year sentence, he is under supervision for two years if paroled.

Those given a life sentence for murder become eligible for parole after serving 10 years. They may then be on parole for life.

One-quarter of a sentence is remitted the moment a man enters prison. Thus a four-year sentence becomes three years.

Those who apply for parole may get out earlier—as a rule they become eligible after serving one-third of the sentence. But they are on parole for the full balance of the sentence.

Those who reject parole, or

STREET
. . . no softie

are unable to get it, are free of supervision when they do get out. Some prisoners reject parole for this reason.

ALLOWED OUT BY DAY

A bill now before Parliament would make supervision mandatory for all released before the full sentence is served.

The man who isn't a good risk obviously needs supervision more than the man who is able to win parole, the board says.

Another feature of the bill would provide for day paroles, allowing prisoners to work or study outside the prison by day, returning at night to their cells.

Indications are that eventually only a hard core of dangerous men will spend much time in prison. And they may find themselves there on indeterminate rather than term sentences as an incentive to change their ways.

One notable case in 1969 may be that of Steven Truscott, who was 14 years old 10 years ago when sentenced to be hanged for the strangling of a younger girl.

Truscott's sentence was commuted to life in prison and he becomes eligible for parole in June.

STUDY TRUSCOTT CASE

Reports are being gathered on him and they will be analysed thoroughly before the parole board makes a recommendation to cabinet.

If the recommendation is for release and the cabinet accepts it, Truscott probably will leave prison with a new name to go to employment in a community where he is unknown.

This has been done successfully in at least two other cases—those of Edmond Alonzo Boyd, whose gang once terrorized Toronto banks, and Evelyn Dick, central figure in a Hamilton murder case that drew national publicity.

Many other parolees are steered away from communities that might harbor resentment toward them into new lives, free of the past.

This has been found to be a practical way to dodge the social ostracization that demoralizes men despite the best of intentions.

The parole board may soon be enlarged to nine members. The act now provides for up to five.

MORE OUT ON PAROLE

The proposed setup would allow it to travel in divisions of three, hearing cases face to face rather than deciding them solely on the basis of reports mailed in from distant places.

The board now has offices in 23 cities and enlists the aid of probation officers, John Howard and Elizabeth Fry Society workers and even RCMP constables to supervise parolees.

Last year about 3,800 prisoners were paroled—more than double the 1964 figure. In 10 years, only 2,500 of the 23,000 men and women paroled have been returned to prison —half for minor offences.

The 265-member staff of the parole board has been hard put to keep up with not only supervision of those paroled but the handling of more than 20,000 applications for parole last year.

The $25,000-a-year chairman presents the record as the best argument for more parole.

"The use of parole can and should be substantially increased because over 60 per cent of the inmates are not dangerous or vicious or violent," Mr. Street says. "Most of them could or should be on parole."

Sir Edmund Strikes Out As N.Z. Political Critic

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — Sir Edmund Hillary, conqueror of Everest, Antarctic explorer and New Zealand national hero, is gaining a new reputation as a somewhat uncomfortable national conscience.

At the height of his fame as a mountaineer, Sir Edmund was widely tipped as a prospective member of Parliament. The general idea seemed to be that he would be a sure-fire vote-getter.

He did not enter politics but served notice of a new approach a couple of years ago with an outspoken criticism of morality in politics.

"Expediency and just plain dishonesty of utterance in government and politics are recorded in our newspapers every day," he said in a speech. He made a plea for "a little more honest-to-God morality into politics and government at all levels nationally and internationally."

Politicians who attacked him for his views came off much the worse in the exchanges. Since then, they have been wary in their dealings with him.

Nowadays Sir Edmund is representative for an American publishing organization. He still spends a good deal of time abroad on various exploration and outdoor projects. He has visited Nepal frequently to assist the Sherpa people who live near the base of Everest. He and his supporters have provided schools, health services, water supplies and other help.

HEADS YOUNG GROUP

For several years he has been president of Volunteer Service Abroad, the New Zealand equivalent of Canada's Company of Young Canadians.

These activities have led him into a new round of criticism of the government for the level of its spending on overseas aid.

New Zealand, he said in a series of recent speeches, was spending only .25 per cent of gross national product on foreign aid. It was simply not good enough.

He directed some personal shafts at Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake, who is also minister of external affairs, arguing that the prime minister appeared to be well satisfied with the aid situation.

Sir Edmund also criticized the plans for a New Zealand rugby tour of South Africa in 1970. The tour is being criticized by various groups in New Zealand as condoning apartheid.

Such views have inevitably aroused criticism in return. From being a national hero, Sir Edmund is tending to become a controversial figure, with reputation even higher among some sections but subject to attack by others.

As always, New Zealanders tend to become more aroused about rugby than other topics, and Sir Edmund's comments on the South African tour have drawn a good deal of fire.

Gowon to Marry

LAGOS (AP) — The Nigerian government announced Wednesday that Maj.-Gen. Yakubu Gowon, head of the military regime, will marry Vietoria Zakari April 19.

CUBA PLOT ALLEGED

LA PAZ (Reuters) — The Bolivian government has charged Cuba with planning a new outbreak of Communist guerrilla activity in this country.

Interior Minister David Fernandez made the charge Tuesday night following the recent arrest of several men suspected of being involved in plans to launch guerrilla warfare.

Simmering Congo May Explode

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo Republic (AP) — This former French African capital is tranquil now, but experienced observers here liken it to a pressure cooker that could explode.

Maj. Marien Ngouabi is still on top after a month-long coup d'etat in August and September. Alphonse Massamba-Debat, president for five years until he was deposed, is under house arrest in a villa.

Maj. Felix Mouzabakani, once Ngouabi's interior minister, is in prison. He was promoted to major by Abbe Fulbert Youlou, the rightist ex-priest overthrown as president by Massamba-Debat. His ties to Youlou deepened the already murky waters of politics here.

Scores of political arrests and other mysterious moves have temporarily put away many elements of the entangled tribal-personal - regional - idealogical conflict among Congo-Brazzaville leaders.

Army rivalries are growing. The tribal and other rifts continue to threaten coalition and national feeling in general. Brazzavillians, southerners, are unhappy at all the fellow northerners Ngouabi has put in top posts.

On the surface, this sleepy city of 170,000 is more peaceful than at any time since the cycle of trouble started last summer.

Results of Star Probe Mystify Astronomers

By ANN EWING

Ever since the $75 million Orbiting Astronomical Observatory II was launched and proved to be operating successfully last December, scientists have eagerly awaited announcement of the first results.

That has now come from two of the principal investigators, Dr. Arthur D. Code of the University of Wisconsin and Robert J. Davis of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass.

The observatory, orbiting in a near-circular 480-mile-high path, is being used to study extremely hot, young stars that emit most of their energy in the invisible ultraviolet portion of the spectrum.

Dr. Code says the seven telescopes of the Wisconsin experiment have revealed unexpected and intense ultraviolet light in several old galaxies. So much ultraviolet light from the Andromeda galaxy (M-31), and so little from M-81, is puzzling, he says, since both "are rather old, garden variety galaxies.

STEADY STATE THEORY

"I do not have the answers yet," he says. "There is a possibility that we might have discovered an old quasar a few million light years away." The 30-odd quasars now known are considered by most astronomers to be very bright objects at distances of billions of light years, although some disagree.

Dr. Code believes that the full impact of OAO — II results will not be felt for at least two years, but predicts that some theories on the origin and evolution of the universe will have to be modified and others discarded by that time. The OAO data studied so far, he says, provide an argument against the steady state theory of the universe, which holds that the universe looks the same, from any point, at any time.

AGING FASTER

"The OAO—II data show," Dr. Code says, "that the total density of luminous matter in the universe is probably not high enough to support a theory of a steady state universe, or even an evolving closed universe."

One theory requiring a change relates to the temperature figures assigned to young, hot stars that have masses in excess of 15 times the sun. Such stars are aging about twice as fast as had been assumed, burning hydrogen at an extremely rapid rate.

This result resolves a discrepancy between the theoretical predictions of the thermonuclear energy produced in these stars and the observed light from the objects.

Several galaxies have been studied in the Wisconsin experiment. While M-31 and M-87 radiated much more ultraviolet light than was expected, M-82, an exploding galaxy, radiated very little. This unexpected observation is without explanation.

RADIATION SHIFT

Dr. Code suggests that some of the blue stellar objects found in searches for quasars may be galaxies whose excess ultraviolet radiation has been shifted into the visible spectrum.

Another implication of the excess ultraviolet radiation is that theoretical models must be recalculated using these new galactic brightnesses before comparison with observations of total sky brightness is valid. The level of total sky brightness is used as one test of cosmological theories.

Police Chief To Give News

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police Chief Tom Reddin, in a surprise announcement, said Wednesday he is resigning to become a Los Angeles television newscaster-commentator.

"I feel," he told a news conference, "that I can better reach the public with the problems of the community as a news commentator. And I am particularly anxious to improve relations between the public and the police department."

The chief, one of the nation's most widely respected law officers, has been head of the Los Angeles police department for almost 26 months.

'Glass Blowing Terrifying Thing'

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Held may be Canada's only teacher of off-hand glass blowing—a "terrifying thing to watch."

"The blower rolls the end of a 4½-foot-long pipe in the heart of a kiln heated to 2,000 degrees," he told an interviewer.

"When he pulls the pipe from the molten glass it has a small lump on the end which he shapes by blowing, rotating the pipe, blowing, returning the pipe to the molten liquid for more, swinging the pipe like a pendulum, flopping it downward —to elongate the object—until it takes on the shape he is after."

During the operation, which can last from 20 minutes for a sculptured bottle to an hour for a more complicated manufacture, sweat pours from the head and neck of the blower.

Mr. Held, 26, teaches a class of about 10 at Sheridan College near here.

"The hardest part is to bear the heat and get a shape that pleases you. If you're not creative and sensitive to your material, you'll never get anything."

The tools used are the same as those used thousands of years ago. Besides the blow pipe, tools are needed to shape the neck.

Mr. Held says there are 32 colleges and universities teaching off-hand glass blowing in the United States. In Canada the only place you can learn the craft is at Sheridan.

Drinking Major Moscow Problem

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

MOSCOW — Three men entered a small food store on a side street the other day. Most of the customers ignored them. The smallest of the three, wearing a black coat and chauffeur's hat, paid two rubles and 87 kopecks ($3.16) for a bottle (0.454 quart) of Moscow "Special" vodka.

He stuck the bottle into his pocket and, followed by his companions, went into a courtyard next door to the store.

One of the men produced a glass from his pocket and in the cold March afternoon they began gulping vodka.

They were playing what is known as "three on a half-liter"—one of the ways to get drunk in Moscow.

Drinking, to many Muscovites, is a way of life, and according to officials, the chief cause of crime and public disorder.

DRINKING MOUNTS

But despite their constant efforts, alcoholism seems to be on the rise and a new campaign was recently launched in the press.

Prof. Yuri Tkachevsky, writing in Pravda, for instance, said that alcoholism was the cause of 40 per cent of all Moscow divorces, that 63 per cent of all those who drown in the Moscow rivers and lakes were drunk and that drunks were responsible for 98 per cent of murders and more than 85 per cent of those who died in fights.

Pointing up the personal tragedy of alcoholism, Komsomolskaya Pravda printed a letter from a girl that said "I like a young man, but he can't possibly like me because I am the daughter of two drunks. Oh, how I envy the sons and daughters of good mothers!"

CAMPAIGNS FAIL

Tkachevsky complained that campaigns had failed in the past because even some Communist party functionaries were known to overindulge, that movies sometimes show sophisticated good-looking people "taking a drink."

"Why should there be propaganda for drinking?" he asked.

He called for the creation of anti-alcohol societies that he said existed in the 1920s to press for an end to heard drinking.

Other suggestions were also made in the press.

A woman said she would be willing to bet her life that if wives would be "uncompromisingly intolerant" of drunken husbands from the first day of marriage there would be no problem.

URGES PROHIBITION

A man from the countryside wrote to a newspaper: "I am a chronically sick alcoholic, and I have come to the view that the only real way to save mankind from alcoholism is a complete ban on the production and sale of all spirits."

Komsomolskaya Pravda dismissed that suggestion as not a realistic solution.

Another writer said the only way to crack down would be to make it possible for enterprises to sell vodka and other spirits at the present large profits made by retail stores and restaurants that sell vodka, cognac and other beverages.

Judging

You are invited by Eaton's and co-sponsors—McCall's Patterns, Canadian Cotton Council and Air Canada — to attend both sessions. Come and see a well-poised group of clever Junior Misses parade their handiwork. Some have fashioned deceptively simple cotton classics. Others will be modelling suits or sportswear separates. All are wearing outfits made by themselves, in cotton, from a McCall's Pattern.

FINAL JUDGING

Starts Friday at 8:00 p.m. in Eaton's Victoria Room, fourth floor.

Features winners of Teenage Sewing Contest in a fashion parade, plus awarding of prizes . . . at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in Eaton's Victoria Room.

Here are the PRIZES!

One-week trip to Toronto via Air Canada for winner and her travelling companion, PLUS the opportunity to participate in the Grand Finals. Grand Prize will be a fun-filled week in London, with £100 spending money.

Nixon Pledges Consultation With Allies on Soviet Talks

By JOHN MIKA

Premier Bennett today came close to rebuking his own back-benchers and publicly apologizing to NDP MLA Gordon Dowding who was driven from the legislature on the last day of the session.

Dowding was formally censured and ordered to leave the legislative chamber in an unprecedented action initiated by a motion from Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver-Centre) and Donald Phillips (SC—South Peace River) a week ago.

Bennett, talking to reporters this morning on his way to a cabinet meeting, reinforced an impression that he privately was opposed to the motion which the Socreds rammed through despite opposition protests that Dowding was not given a fair chance to defend himself.

"There has been too much discussion on personalities," Bennett said in reviewing the session.

'TERRIBLE ATTACK'

"There was a terrible attack on Mr. Sommers and Mr. Gaglardi and now Mr. Dowding.

Bennett said he had never dealt in personalities during his 27 years in public office and opposed such tactics.

"I always leave personalities alone," he said.

Asked if he had lost control of his party when it expelled Dowding, Bennett replied:

"I never had control at any time because every single member, whether it's a cabinet or private member, has a right to speak in his own voice."

Beenett didn't explain why he voted along with the rest of his party to heave Dowding out of the legislature for the last day.

It was remarked at the time that the premier was the last to get to his feet in the roll-call vote and appeared to hesitate in thought before finally standing with the Socreds around him.

NDP Has Choice Of Young Blood

By JOHN SLINGER
Times Staff Writer

British Columbia's New Democratic Party faithful will gather at Vancouver during the next three days to select a new leader.

Delegates will choose from three young MLAs—the main candidates—a successor to Robert Strachan.

And, beyond anything else, whoever is chosen leader will face the problem of convincing this province's voters that the party is a credible alternative to Premier Bennett's government.

Whichever man is chosen, he is convinced he will lead not only a stronger, newer New Democratic Party, but will also lead that party to victory over the Social Credit monolith.

But while the three believe this is possible and while the party faithful continue faithful, the question remains whether anybody else will go along.

Were a majority of B.C. voters to be convinced, the effect would be like being hauled out of a nice warm bed to take a flying leap into a bathtub full of ice cubes, an exercise both stimulating and startling.

Certainly startling. The NDP and its forerunner, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, have been Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition for 28 years.

Long Enough to Build Two Romes

That has been long enough to see two Romes built and one destroyed.

The first was the Liberal-Conservative coalition that fell in 1952 when William Andrew Cecil Bennett played barbarian with a personal version of Social Credit that has appeared all things to most people ever since.

His master stroke was accomplished by crying that the coalition had been in power too long, that it had gone soft, that it had left this resource-rich province prey to—dread word—socialism.

Well, first the Liberals, then the Conservatives and then the two together had run the show for 24 years.

Now Bennett himself has run the show for 17 years and the barbarians are at the gate again. They are all under 40 years old and they cry that the 69-year-old premier has been in power too long, that his government has gone soft, that it has left this resource-rich province prey to—dread words—corporate domination.

They are David Barrett, 38, social worker and member for Coquitlam; Thomas Berger, 36, lawyer and member for Vancouver-Burrard; and Robert Williams, 36, town planner and member for Vancouver East.

They seek a mantle that sent its first wearer, Harold Winch, haring off to the relative calm of the House of Commons; then it just plain wore out Robert Strachan.

Strachan spent 13 years jibing and jousting across the red carpet with Bennett and says he's too old to continue as leader.

That's his stated reason for retiring and it was a rather pointed jab at the premier, 13 years Strachan's senior.

Achieved a Victory of Sorts

Besides, Strachan achieved a victory of sorts — the highways department has finally begun paving the Lake Cowichan road. The hideous road that cuts through Strachan's Cowichan-Malahat constituency has been a personal cause celebre for so long that it became a standing joke.

And there is an irony in that road being paved. It touches the larger question of highways and hydro-electric dams that the Bennett government has built with a vengeance throughout B.C.

The opposition believe that in its haste to provide the roads and power to meet the needs of a booming resource economy, the government has neglected to meet the educational, hospital and other social needs of individuals within that economy.

There are a couple of curious riddles facing the New Democrats-as-potential-premiers as well.

They can't say they will be a whole new show because Bennett has not been loath to hammer the province's electric utilities and ferry system into public ownership if he felt that was the best way to serve B.C.

And the three have joined the rest of their party in adopting hard-line positions against what they call monopolistic control of the

'We Must Build Strong Alliance'

(Times News Services)

WASHINGTON—President Nixon today pledged to keep U.S. NATO allies fully informed on the strategic arms control talks with the Soviet Union likely to begin soon.

In an address at the 20th anniversary NATO foreign ministers' meeting he said the talks would be "a test of the ability of the Western nations to shape a common strategy."

Looking to the future, he commented: "We would do well to create new machinery for Western political consultation as well as to make greater use of the process that already exists."

The president made no specific mention of a recurrent Communist suggestion that the NATO nations and the Warsaw Pact governments in the Soviet bloc meet in an effort to end the cold war.

At the initial session of the NATO council this morning, Italy's foreign minister, Pietro Nenni, advocated such a meeting as soon as possible. However, Foreign Minister Joseph Luns of The Netherlands urged a slow approach to such a conference. He recommended that NATO should request clarification by the Communists on their proposal.

OLD CONCEPTS

Nixon confined himself in his prepared remarks to the observation that the time has come for "unfreeezing our old concepts of East versus West, while never losing sight of great ideological differences."

The United States has been wary of an immediate NATO-Warsaw get-together, favoring instead that some solid groundwork be laid by individual conferences between the various governments on both sides.

MAKES PLEDGE

"The United States fully intends to undertake deep and genuine consultation with its allies both before and during any negotiations directly affecting their interests. That is a pledge I shall honor—and I expect to consult at length on the implications of anything that might affect the pattern of East-West relations."

The president proposed these steps for improving consultation machinery of the NATO governments. They were:

- Periodic meetings of deputy foreign ministers "for a high-level review of major, long-range problems before the alliance."
- Creation of a special political planning group to deal specifically and on a continuing basis with long-range problems.
- Establishment of a special committee on "the challenges of modern society" to work "toward improving the quality of life for our peoples."

Nixon acknowledged there are differences of opinion among the NATO members but said they need not become seriously divisive.

He summarized: "I believe we must build an alliance strong enough to deter those who would threaten us; close enough to provide for continuous and far-reaching consultation; trusting enough to accept a diversity of views; realistic enough to deal with the world as it is; flexible enough to explore new channels of constructive co-operation."

NATO AND ITS MYTHS

Times correspondent Anthony Westell in a special dispatch from Washington today on Page 16 tells how Canada got into NATO and also relates some of the myths which have grown up about the organization.

In particular, he puts to rest the notion that NATO was originally conceived to forestall an imminent Soviet invasion of Western Europe, and that the commitment of a large Canadian military force in Europe was an integral part of the original NATO plan.

"By withdrawing forces now," Mr. Westell notes, Canada is not withdrawing from NATO. It is returning . . . to the position in 1949 when NATO was launched."

ABMs Said 'Incredible Mistake'

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, a key scientific adviser to Senate opponents of the Safeguard defence program, says the Nixon administration's decision to build the anti-ballistic missile system is an incredible mistake.

"Security just can't be achieved that way," physicist Lapp said in an interview amplifying on his challenge to the proposed Safeguard ABM system. "It seems to me that this whole business is incredible.

"What we're doing is building up forces that will provoke the Russians into building up unlimited forces."

Lapp, 51, is a long-time critic of the defence department and the Atomic Energy Commission who has had a way of turning out to be right.

HITS AT REASONING

His latest effort strikes at the roots of the administration's reasoning for deploying the controversial Safeguard—that American nuclear missiles must be protected from a Russian nuclear "first strike."

The position was laid out by Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird, who told Congress the Soviet Union is building toward a first-strike capability. He based the prediction on reports the Russians are planning to deploy a huge new missile known as the SS-9, capable of carrying one massive warhead or, later, three smaller ones.

Laird said that with the growing number of SS-9 missiles the Soviet Union might reach the point of being able to destroy enough United States Minuteman missile sites that Soviet

Bloody Clash Injures 30 As Harvard Sit-In Halted

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 400 policemen swept 200 protesters out of Harvard's University Hall today in a bloody clash that left 30 persons hurt and about 200 under arrest.

The helmeted police, some swinging clubs, stormed through a mass of students to get inside the hall which had been seized Wednesday by youths protesting Harvard's Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

Historic Harvard Yard was alive with turmoil. Whistles, yells, jeers and curses reverberated through the area as police, in tight formations, swept back and forth in skirmished platoons.

Bottles and other objects were hurled at police, some from neighboring buildings.

CARRIED FROM HALL

Many of those arrested were carried bodily from the hall and thrust into police wagons.

In California, a mass sit-in continued at a Stanford University laboratory to protest classified military research on campus.

Student protesters at the New Orleans campus of Southern University forced the closing of the school Wednesday after a clash with police. The college dean locked himself in a office to escape rampaging students.

The sit-in at Harvard, led by members of Students for a Democratic Society, started at noon Wednesday when the students took over the building and forced several deans to leave. One was evicted bodily.

They demanded an immediate end to all Reserve Officers Training Corps programs at Harvard, the oldest college in the United States. President Nathan Pusey said he couldn't take their demands seriously.

Pusey said Harvard has contracts with the military forces. He said these are to be renegotiated in light of a faculty vote to deny academic credit for ROTC course and strip faculty status from ROTC instructors.

In California, an estimated 400 persons began a sit-in Wednesday night at the Stanford University Electronic Laboratory where military research is conducted.

The action followed a three-hour mass meeting where 1,000 persons voted 2 to 1 to begin the sit-in immediately to protest the lack of action by Stanford trustees on demands that there be no more classified military research on campus.

The trustees, meeting Monday, directed the Stanford Research Institute not to undertake any new contracts in chemical and biological warfare research but did not act on the other demands.

In New Orleans, police arrested about 20 persons, all Negroes, during the demonstration at Southern University. The charges ranged from desecration of the American flag to reviling police and resisting arrest.

Suez Canal Erupts With New Battle

TEL AVIV (CP) — Another battle broke out along the Suez Canal today between artillery and tank units of Israel and Egypt.

An Israeli army spokesman said Egyptian gunners opened fire on Israeli troops near Ismailia in the northern sector of the 103-mile waterway and near Port Taufiq at the southern end.

About a dozen shells had been lobbed from Egypt at Israeli troops two hours earlier, but the Israelis did not return fire, he said.

Cairo radio charged Israeli forces opened up with artillery and tank fire along a 60-mile length of the Suez Canal.

It added the Israelis started firing in the Port Taufiq-Suez area and then extended the battle northward to the region of El Qantara.

ATTACK PATROL

The Israeli spokesman said that Arab guerrillas earlier fired bazooka shells on an Israeli Army patrol near the Sea of Galilee.

The patrol was fired on from across the ceasefire line near Ashdod Ya'acov, about three miles south of the Sea of Galilee, the sources said.

The patrol returned the fire, the sources said. They said one Israeli soldier was wounded in the clash.

Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1969—PAGE 13

Arthur Mayse

Among Victoria's mail-box watchers is a friendly, grey-thatched motion-picture projectionist by the name of Bert Abbott. Each morning for weeks, he has hoped to find a letter from the Passport Office in the little metal bin on his front porch wall.

But that letter hasn't turned up, and with a trip to Europe and about $600 at stake, Bert is feeling the strain.

Before I tell you his story, here's a warning that this English-born Canadian of 50 years residence bids me pass on to all who may be planning trips abroad.

"Don't delay in applying for your passport. What used to take only a week or two now seems to require months."

Footsteps sounded on the pavement. They passed on along Hampshire Road, and Bert completed his message. "What seems like too soon may not be soon enough."

★

The Abbotts began their own planning last fall. Bert would add a month of leave to his holidays this year, and they'd visit the British Isles and the Continent. They hope to leave in May.

Aware that External Affairs has tightened up on regulations governing Canadian passports since Martin Luther King's American slayer used one of these precious tokens to ease his escape, they started operations in February.

The first step was to make application for proof of Canadian Citizenship, a matter which had given Bert no trouble in the past. (His wife, Canadian-born, does not figure in this account.)

At Victoria Courthouse, he produced the appropriate documents, among them some that showed he had left London for Canada as a child. He topped these off with an affadavit.

What he expected to receive from External Affairs was a plastic-enclosed card affirming his Canadian identity and clearing the way for his passport application.

What he got, after a weary wait, was a letter asking him to forward his birth certificate.

Since he had met all with requirements set forth on the government form, this request puzzled him. But he complied, and resigned himself to another wait.

Today, almost two months after he made his application for proof, he's still waiting.

"I've given them more evidence than was asked for," Bert Abbott told me over coffee, "and I understand that they have to be very thorough and careful. But I can't think what's holding things up."

Many another would-be traveller is asking that same question — one that has been sharply echoed by Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson.

And, as Bert points out, the delay could cost them a good deal in money and disappointment.

★

He and his wife are booked on one of the scores of chartered flights that carry British Columbians overseas from Vancouver.

Seat reservations for these must be made months in advance, and be backed by a down payment on the fare.

Full payment is required up to 60 days before take-off.

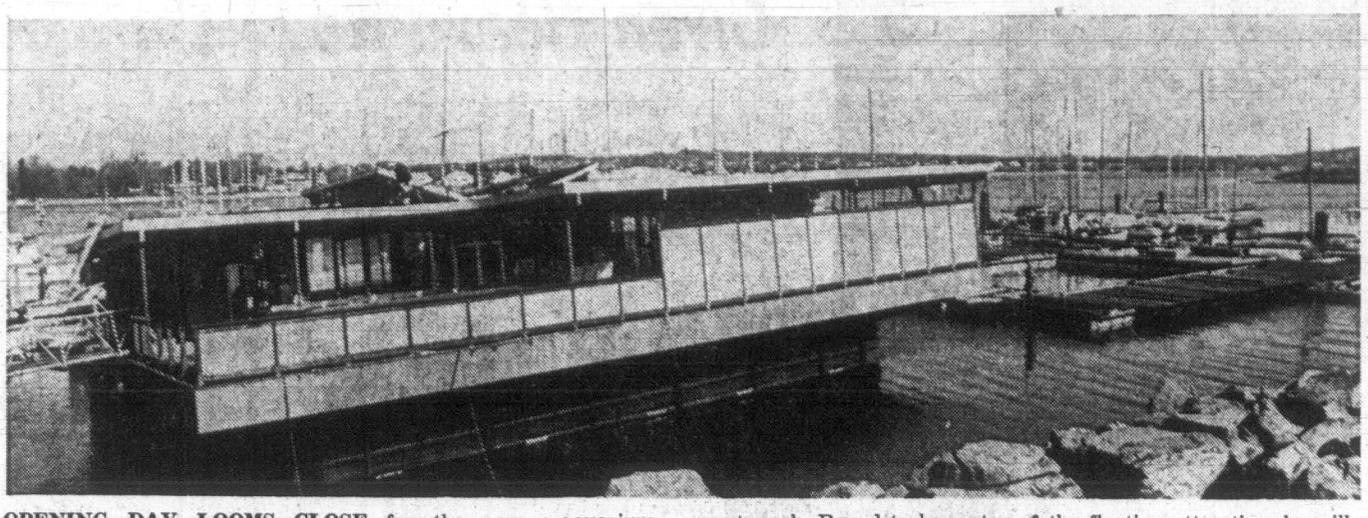
"There's no refund, either," Bert told me. "You can take out insurance, as we did for $6 but that only provides for a partial rebate in case of sickness."

The Abbotts are in excellent health, and they are also patient in spite of a frustrating situation. Still, they feel that prospective travellers should have been warned by External Affairs Minister Michael Sharp regarding the time required for a clearance.

"I can't apply for my passport until that first application is approved," Bert sums up, "and even when it is, I suppose I'm in for another wait."

An outlandish situation, I think you'll agree, and one that badly needs righting!

Bert walked with me to the door. The mailman had come and gone, but the letter he'd left wasn't the one on which a long-planned trip hangs.



OPENING DAY LOOMS CLOSE for the new seaquarium receiving final touches at the Oak Bay Marina. "Sealand of the Pacific," officials say, is due to open in early May. The unique structure, half as large again as the former one at the marina, will have five separate floating compartments. One of these at the far end, 68 feet wide and 88 feet long, will house a 14-foot, 3,500-pound killer whale which is due to be flown here from Seattle next week. Bound to be a star of the floating attraction, he will be carried aboard a transport plane, and be regularly sluiced down during his trip. Other occupants of the marine complex will include four dolphins, various types of fish, octopuses, sea lions and live sea birds of the area. The latter will be able to be seen from both above and below the waterline. (Times Photo By Bill Halkett)

$5 Million Lost Aid 'Shameful'

Region Taxpayers Hit By Board's Indecision?

By JOHN MIKA

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today said he agrees with Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal MP David Anderson that it is shameful Greater Victoria ratepayers may lose $5 million of federal help for sewer projects through default.

But he disagreed with Anderson's suggestion it was the provincial government's fault.

Loffmark said the responsibility lies entirely in the hands of the Greater Victoria regional board which is in charge of the proposed metro sewer project.

Anderson made his comments Wednesday night to a meeting of the Esquimalt Provincial Liberal Association, pointing out that a deadline for federal subsidies on trunk sewers, outfalls and sewage treatment plants runs out March 31 next year.

SPRING DEADLINE

He said the $23 million Greater Victoria sewer project which has been under civic discussion for two years could have qualified for up to $5 million of federal assistance if completed by next spring.

"All this federal money is being held up," said Anderson. "Why aren't we taking advantage of it?"

He said he was "pushing hard" to ensure that the Esquimalt naval base would be connected to the proposed sewer system, if it is built, to cut down pollution of the harbor.

"To delay (the project) is just crazy," he said.

Anderson urged the provincial Liberals to write letters "as individuals" to Loffmark demanding action to start construction of the sewer project.

"It's not to me but to the regional board that they should write," Loffmark said this morning.

"I find it hard to reconcile Mr. Anderson's concern for cleaning up pollution quickly with the statements of his fellow Liberal, Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich who wants to dump raw sewage into the waters around Greater Victoria."

Loffmark said his own warning to the regional board that primary treatment plants will be required if there is any extension of the existing sewer system did not constitute an obstacle to obtaining the federal subsidy.

He pointed out the Ottawa assistance was primarily intended to help defray the costs of sewage treatment and prevention of pollution.

"It's up to the board to start the work but if there is anything specific anyone wants me to do to help, I'd like to know what it is because I'm certainly anxious to do my part in combatting the spread of pollution."

Regional Board Tardy, Loffmark Wants Beds

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today said he is "still concerned" with the Greater Victoria regional hospital board's tardiness in deciding how it will distribute the 600 extended-care beds approved by ratepayers last year.

"I expressed concern last month over the time it is taking to allocate these beds and I'm still concerned," said Loffmark in a telephone interview from Vancouver.

"But (Victoria) Mayor Hugh Stephen assures me that they will have plans ready for all 600 beds by the end of April and I am content to wait that much longer."

He was asked for comments on attacks by Stephen and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis against senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread who suggested there has been undue delay in formulating plans to use the $9.3 million voted by ratepayers last fall.

Stephen is current chairman of the regional hospital board and Curtis is past-chairman. Both described Dr. Whitbread's comments as a "deplorable" intrusion into the board's affairs.

Loffmark, who has overall responsibility for co-ordinating the jurisdiction of the province's 25 MHOs, was diplomatic when asked if he thought Dr. Whitbread really had overstepped the bounds of his job in discussing hospital requirement.

GOOD FAITH

"I have the highest regard for Dr. Whitbread and also for Mayor Stephen and I believe they're both expressing their views in good faith," he said.

"To my knowledge, however, the regional hospital board has only allocated 150 (proposed) extended-care beds to Gorge Road Hospital and 25 to Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island and our department has approved.

"They also have indicated recently to us they will allocate a number of beds to the north part of Saanich peninsula but other than that there have not been any plans submitted so far."

Dr. Whitbread touched off the sharp retorts from the two mayors by saying it was "fantastic" that only 150 beds had been firmly allocated a year after the referendum. He said the board should lease or buy existing facilities to meet the critical shortage now.

This brought from Mayor Stephen:

NO UNDERSTANDING

"For him to depart from the context of his particular job and make gratuitous comments of this kind is most unfortunate to say the least.

"As mayor and chairman of the hospital board, I deeply deplore this intrusion which can only be a grave disservice."

Stephen suggested that Whitbread "confine his observations to his immediate area of responsibility."

Dr. Whitbread's "statement is not correct," Curtis said. "I find his comments most improper for a department head, which is really his position in the community.

"He speaks without knowledge of the progress which has been made, and particularly without regard for the significant advances made in recent weeks by Mayor Stephen and directors of the regional board.

EXAGGERATION

"Even the reference that it is one year since the referendum was held is an unacceptable exaggeration. It was held, in fact, last October."

Curtis added that he was becoming increasingly concerned over "Dr. Whitbread's ill-considered comments on regional matters."

Outlining the progress already made in the hospital field Stephen said recommendations for a further 360 extended care beds for the district will be made later this month.

In addition, Stephen said the regional hospital district has recommended 150 beds for Gorge Road, 75 beds at the north end of Saanich Peninsula and 15 at Ganges. The rest will be recommended to the next meeting.

He said 165 beds (150 at Gorge Road and 15 at Ganges) have been approved "and we have in effect made recommendations regarding the 600 beds within a period of just over two months."

The district's advisory committee has also explored the preliminary stages of acute-care beds with a view to a referendum this year.

Falling Beam Hits Worker, Condition Fair

A 21-year-old man is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital after an industrial accident this morning at the CPR building 468 Bellville Street.

Jack Bradstock, 1312 Blanshard, suffered back injuries when a 12 by 12-inch beam fell on him at about 8 a.m.

He was part of a crew demolishing the structure. He was injured as part of the frame fell.

Hospital officials reported he was under intensive care at press time.

JORGENSEN

$3,000 Grant For Artist

Well-known Victoria painter and printmaker Flemming Jorgensen has received a $3,000 grant from the Canada Council. He will use the grant to work full-time for several months in Victoria.

The artist came to Victoria from Denmark 12 years ago. Since that time he has become known for his work in other Canadian provinces, as well as Washington and California, where he has held several exhibitions.

He has had several local exhibitions and has been awarded prizes at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria's annual jury exhibitions and Winnipeg Art Gallery's biennial exhibition.

In 1967 Jorgensen received a small grant from the council to do graphic work while in Denmark.

Trust Manager To Hold Post Premier Hints

Premier Bennett today hinted he does not intend to depose Vancouver accountant A. G. Peter Stanley as the government-appointed manager of Commonwealth Trust Company.

Bennett told reporters he has received a telegram from four Commonwealth Trust shareholders requesting Stanley's removal.

But he pointed out that the request did not come from the company's board of directors nor from last month's special meeting of shareholders to decide whether the company should seek a provincial loan of up to $3 million offered in special legislation.

Asked if he was considering replacing Stanley, Bennett said: "I said in the legislature that there should be a time when the shareholders and the new directors should take control of the company and themselves and get away from the expense of having Mr. Stanley in that office."

EMERGENCY

(The Premier repeatedly told MLAs that Stanely was appointed as an emergency measure when the government found the company was headed for collapse and would not take corrective action ordered by the provincial cabinet. He said the government would step out if the company was reformed with new equity capital and new management.)

The Premier added that only the shareholders and directors can save any company in the final analysis but he would not guess whether the company will be able to raise the minimum $1 million in new stock sales required to qualify it for the government loan.

The premier also said he had tracked lown the cause of the rumor that Commonwealth Trust had donated a huge political campaign gift to the Social Credit Party.

He said all trust companies must make a $200,000 deposit with the provincial treasury as part of the requirements in starting business in the province and Commonsealth Trust had done so.

Two Doctors On Traffic Casualty List

A two-car accident at Richardson and St. Charles overnight sent three persons to hospital, two of them doctors.

Dr. Elinor D. Powell, 39, of 657 Moss, suffered chest, back and arm injuries and is in satisfactory condition.

Cherry Fitzgibbon, 46, of Penticton, is also in satisfactory condition with undetermined injuries.

Dr. Roger G. Congdon, 40, of 440 Simcoe was discharged from Royal Jubilee Hospital after treatment for head and knee cuts.

Police said Dr. Congdon was heading south on St. Charles about 11 p.m. when his car was in collision with Dr. Powell's vehicle, westbound on Richardson.

Dr. Powell's car then struck a street sign and a parked car. Damage totalled $1,600.

Mrs. Fitzgibbon was a passenger in Dr. Powell's car.

A woman critically injured in an accident near Qualicum Saturday is now in fairly good condition.

Mrs. June Sekkemo, 1430 Simon, suffered multiple face and body injuries.

Impaired Drivers Avoid Jail When Arm-of-Law Fumbles Case

By DERYK THOMPSON

Carelessness by police or court officials sometimes allows a twice-convicted impaired driver to escape the jail term demanded under the law.

Twice within the last week examples have been evident in Victoria's central magistrate's court.

Section 223 (b) of the Criminal Code says a second offence of impaired driving is punishable by imprisonment for not more than three months and not less than 14 days. A third conviction can bring a jail term of between three months and a year.

However when the driving record of an accused person was read to the court last Wednesday Magistrate William Ostler noted it included three convictions for impaired driving since December 1966, two of them in 1968.

The dispositions on his record showed he was fined $300 on the first, $450 on the second and $250 on the third charge.

Mr. Ostler suggested the only reason the man had not received jail terms was that the presiding magistrate could not have been told of the record.

On Saturday a city man, who pleaded guilty to his second charge of impaired driving was given a $400 fine. His first conviction, several years ago, was not brought to the attention of the court.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said afterwards he had not been told of the previous conviction before the proceedings.

"If I had known about it he would have been proceeded against as a second offender like anyone else," he added.

Further questioning of officials revealed that the arresting Oak Bay police officer was late in bringing the circumstances of the case to court and therefore no one was informed.

WARNING

It is customary practice that an accused with one conviction for impaired driving within the previous five years must be "warned" before proceedings can begin. This must be done before he enters a plea.

The "warning" is given privately by the court officer to the accused who is told that having previously been convicted of the same offence he is liable to greater punishment if convicted again.

In Saturday's case the court officer said when this was learned about the accused, it was too late to warn him before the plea was made.

A little known fact is that impaired drivers on their first conviction can be jailed up to three months at the discretion of the magistrate.

They can also receive a fine of $500 in addition to or instead of the jail term.

The usual practice in Victoria is a fine ranging from $300 to $500 depending on the seriousness of the case.

Parachute He Left in War-Torn Italy Takes Ex-Pilot on Sentimental Journey

By PAT DUFOUR

An Oak Bay businessman is going to visit Italy this summer to recover a piece of lost property. And it may take a little doing.

Bill Garrett-Petts, 1832 Carnarvon, will be visiting Florence to try to find the parachute which bore him into the hills around the city where his RAF Beau fighter reconnaissance plane was shot down in the Second World War.

He hasn't been back since the war but is confident that his search will be successful.

It will start at an imposing home in Florence which was commandeered by the German high command at the time he was there.

He hopes to find it inhabited by the previous owners, Dr. and Mrs. Adolph Mischini. He explains why.

●

"I lay in the hill district of Mulcapini, six miles outside Florence, for eight days after I parachuted down.

"My leg was wounded and it was turning to gangrene. On the eighth day I saw a whole tribe of people coming up the hill. I thought they were enemy partisans at first, or Germans. At that time, the Americans were advancing on German-held Florence."

As they came close, the flyer saw that the group included women and children. It was the entire Mischini family, 28 in all, fleeing because of their fear of reprisals after being turned out of their home.

BILL GARRETT-PETTS
. . . racing the moths

"The doctor spoke English (he'd worked at Guy's Hospital in London) and he was the one who treated me and saved my leg. His wife poured a whole bottle of eau de cologne over it. It was the only antiseptic we had."

●

Garrett-Petts stayed with the family for five days until the Germans were routed from Florence. The family moved back to the city and he went to a casualty clearing centre located outside Pompeii.

When he parted with the Mischinis, the flyer gave them his parachute for safe-keeping, promising to return some day to retrieve it.

That was his last contact with them.

Garrett-Petts finally returned to England, and in 1945 was sent on loan by the RAF to BOAC, to become area manager for Baghdad and Iraq.

His life at the Abbaniyihna station, 60 miles outside Baghdad, was almost as eventful as his days in Italy. Operator of a used book and record exchange in Oak Bay for the past 12 years, Garrett-Petts' adventures in the Middle East rival some of the tales in the books he sells.

They include the night he baby-sat a ransom of diamonds.

"The plane carrying diamonds from Durban to India for the old Aga-Khan's weigh-in was forced down on a lake near us. I was to stand the first two-hour watch.

"I ended up in staying in that plane all night because it was too rough to change watches. All I could think about was what would happen if the plane's moorings gave and she and her cargo drifted 30 miles across to the other side of the lake."

Six weeks later he was to have an even closer experience with the Aga Khan. The 300-pound ruler was returning from his weigh-in when his plane developed engine trouble.

●

He, the Begum (his wife) and the current Aga Khan, Prince Saladin, (then a boy of 11) spent 10 days as the station's guests.

"Every night I'd have to sit on the lawn with the Aga Khan and drink a bottle of port and smoke cigars.

"His wife was a beautiful woman . . . the smell of her perfume permeated the place a month after they left!"

Garrett-Petts also became a close friend of the sheikhs who ruled the area, especially two brothers, Abdul Rezek and Abdul Jahbourb, who had received an annual $10,000 bounty from the British. They had saved the station's personnel from death when they were marched in chains to Baghdad by forces of the pro-German Raschid Ali, cousin of King Feisal, in the early 1940 risings.

●

The two brothers once presented Garrett-Petts' station with a gift of three horses, one of which his staff trained to win the coveted big Gold Cup Race.

In true Arab fashion, the brothers thought twice about their gift. They sent some of their tribesmen to get the horse back. The night raid was fought off by Garrett-Petts' staff.

Abdul Rezek, at least, has not learned the error of his ways. There's now a price on his head for his rebel activities during recent years.

Garrett-Petts will be accompanied on his coming trip by his wife, Margaret, and their two sons, Christopher, 21, and William, 15.

He reports his sons are only "mildly interested" in the retracing of his Italian escape and his wife threatens to make some dresses out of his "lost property."

"That is, if it isn't completely moth-eaten."

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me the name (if any) of the rocky knoll that lies between Beacon Hill and Gonzales Hill, and within the quadrilateral bounded by Fairfield Rd., Memorial Crescent, May and Moss Streets? —N. T. P.

A. Approximately 4.61 acres, between May St. and Masters Rd. were reserved as unimproved parkland in 1959. The official name is Fairfield Hill Park.
